The Mikado's Review. Justice, Exact, Is Rare. Our Average Citizen. Eat Slowly.

By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1927, By Star Publishing Co.

JAPAN'S NEW EMPEROR, Hirohito, will review his navy, warships, submarines, almost as big as battleships, and fighting airplanes will show the Mikado what he could do.

A mock attack will be made on Japan's northern naval base and chiefly the offense will consist of bomb dropping planes. Japan did not invent the flying machine, but realizes its power, and knows that floating steel targets cannot stand against swift, bomb dropping airplanes.

Exact justice is rare. L. F. Armstrong beat his daughters, 12 and 15 years old, savagely, and was freed on probation. The judge regretted that he could not have Armstrong flogged as he had flogged his daughters.

Mr. Bash, who helped to pour gasoline on a dog, setting fire to it, burning the dog so horribly that it had to be killed, was fined $18. What would you have done in those child beating, dog burning cases? The second judge, of course, did not regret that he couldn't pour gasoline on the man and set fire to him. Justice imitating the criminal, as when it hangs a murderer, is no remedy for crime.

The remedy is education, and that is slow.

A gentleman, looking the field over, carefully finds the average American citizen the keeper of a "one man clothing store" in a small town. He belongs to a church but does not go regularly, has an "average education," which means none to speak of, takes little interest in anything except his family and his business, never reads the foreign news, just goes along through life very much like any chicken in his chicken yard, if he has a chicken yard. Fortunately for the nation it is not made up exclusively of average citizens.

Garnett Wright, British expert in surgical pathology, says something that fifty million Americans should remember. "Eating rapidly is the most common cause of stomach ulcers." Napoleon, who boasted that he never spent more than ten or twelve minutes at a meal, died of ulcers of the stomach in his St. Helena prison. He should have remembered the wise old French saying, Dîner bien fuse, est mottie digere, "A dinner well talked is half digested." Allowing thirty minutes or more for slow eating with friendly talk means adding years to your life.

The United States Labor Bureau says American women spend $5,000,000 a day, $1,825,000,000 a year, on beauty shops and

YALE DEFEATS ARMY, 10 TO 6 BEFORE 77,000

MRS. NICHOLS RALLIES SLIGHTLY AFTER SLEEP

A slight improvement in the condition of Mrs. Carrie M. Nichols, wife of the mayor, was reported this noon at Boston City Hospital, where she is critically ill as a result of becoming a mother a few days ago.

A bulletin issued, signed by Doctors John J. Dowling, William H. Robey and John T. Williams, said: "Mrs. Nichols' condition shows a slight improvement. She has slept almost continuously since midnight. Respiration still somewhat embarrassed. Temperature 99.4. Pulse 118. Respiration 40."

Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols, who had returned from breakfast after having been at the hospital all night, was much encouraged by the report, and smiled for the first time in hours.

Mayor Nichols later told newspapermen his wife's condition was

55,000 SEE CRIMSON BOW TO BIG GREEN AFTER VALIANT STAND

Stadium, Oct. 22.—Dartmouth defeated Harvard today, 30 to 6, but the score does not tell the story.

With the score 10 to 0 against it midway in the third period, Harvard threw a scare into the Green cohorts when Coombs, the Crimson end, blocked a punt on the Dartmouth 18-yard stripe and four plays later a Crimson jerseyed warrior was over for a touchdown.

It was a great but losing stand by the Cambridge outfit, for a few minutes later, tired from their efforts, they crumbled under the driving attack of the Dartmouth backs and Myles Lane dashed around end for 20 yards and the second Green touchdown.

Two more Dartmouth touchdowns followed in this, the fourth period, and Harvard was soundly drubbed.

There was no scoring in the first period, although Dartmouth started a rush late in the session with Al Marsters, Arlington boy, starring.

The Green attack completely swept the Crimson off its feet but when Cole, Dartmouth's star end, was detected clipping the Green was penalized twenty-five yards and its chances of scoring simmered.

Dartmouth got a break when Harvard was caught fouling on Hamm's punt and the Green was given the ball on the Crimson 20-yard line. Marsters sent the wild throng in the stands howling when he ripped off a twelve-yard gain but fumbled.

Crosby rammed his way off left tackle for first down on Dartmouth's 48-yard line.

LORD WANTS TO SEE HIS WIFE'S SLAYER DIE ON GUILLOTINE

DEMANDS JUSTICE IN TRAGEDY

After receiving today the last affectionate letter written by his wife a few days before she was killed, Horace Wilfred Lord, husband of the beautiful Countess Marcelle Vernet-Lord, who was killed in France after dabbling in an exotic love cult, declared he would, "in a spirit of justice," apply for permission to see her slayer guillotined.

Tears were in the eyes of the Boston instructor and World War veteran as he turned from the letter to say in a trembling voice that this desire "to see justice satisfied" and to defend his dead wife's reputation would take him soon to France to help the government's case against Wenceslas de Klupfell, alias "Dr. Rudy," the alleged slayer.

"I want to see his execution and I shall apply for a ticket, not in a spirit of revenge but in a spirit of justice," he said.

ATTESTS HER LOVE

"Here is my wife's last letter. See, is it not affectionate? But see how she has underlined the date, October 13, that unlucky numeral, five times? Something was troubling her, yet you will see here a denial of the rumor that she left me to become an active member of a love cult.

"This piece of lavender pinned to the page is in itself eloquent testimony of her love. She begins the letter, 'My loving husband,' and she ends it with these words: 'I leave you, kissing you from my heart.'

"This is one of the few letters she wrote in French, her native language, and I shall not translate all of it for you because it is too beautiful, too intimate—meant only for me.

NOT LIKE STORY

"It reminds me of a story I wrote but June for a magazine. It was called 'My Confession,' and much of my own story was embodied in it. At the ending I had planned to have the heroine, my wife, killed by the man who desired her, but I could not bring myself to believe that a beautiful woman should be killed either in fiction or in life, and so I ended it with him being killed by her.

He declared he had a premonition shortly before his wife's death that she was to die and this premonition was so strong that he bought dark clothes and a mourning band for his arm which he is now wearing.

Lord said he has cabled an attorney in France to take care of his interests and to try to ascertain what has become of his wife's jewelry.

Lord's presence in France will be required by the settlement of his dead wife's estate, adjustment of his own affairs in Nice and as star witness at the trial of De Klupfell, the dashing son of an exiled Russian admiral, who is charged with stabbing the countess to death.

The young Back Bay instructor hotly denied that his wife was an active disciple of any love cult despite liberal discussion of free love in her letters to him, and in the face of sealed reports today that the countess and Klupfell first met at Dr. Goldberg's love colony among the hills at Falicon where followers capered a la Adam and Eve until warned to wear clothes by a local magistrate.

A FAINTING SPELL

Lord has kept the cable hot between Boston and Nice since informed of his wife's tragic death and he has also been in constant communication with his attorney.

"Spending $100 in two days for needs.

ARCHBISHOP OF IRELAND IS DEAD

Dublin, Ireland, Oct. 22 (A.P.).—Patrick Cardinal O'Donnell primate of Ireland, died today at Carlingford, where he had been ill several weeks suffering from double pneumonia.

Bonfires blazed on the hills of Donegal on the night of Dec. 14, 1925; they marked the elevation on that day to the cardinalate of Monsignor Patrick O'Donnell, Archbishop of Armagh, who from a Donegal cottage had risen to the rank of prince of the church.

The history of his family was for years the history of Donegal. From the thirteenth to the seventeenth centuries the O'Donnells ruled in Donegal and no other princely Gaelic house produced as many able men. Cardinal O'Donnell was born in Kilraine, Glenties, County Donegal, in 1856.

For some years he was the youngest bishop in the church, having been appointed Bishop of Raphoe by Pope Leo XIII, when he was 33. He had previously been a professor of theology in St. Patrick's College, Maynooth.

Raphoe covers the county of Donegal and the young bishop had a diocese that was poor. Bishop O'Donnell was a fluent speaker of Gaelic and won the hearts of his people by his devotion to their needs.

Irish Primate's Death Shocks O'Connell

The death of Cardinal O'Donnell, primate of Ireland, was a shock to Cardinal O'Connell, an old friend, according to a statement he issued today. Cardinal O'Connell said he frequently met the Irish primate during visits to Rome, and characterized him as a prelate whose passing will be regretted by every Irishman and every man of Irish blood in this country. Cardinal O'Connell's statement reads:

BY WILLIAM CARDINAL O'CONNELL.

To me the news of Cardinal O'Donnell's death was a shock and a surprise. He was always so vigorous and so healthy and looked so well during the Eucharistic Congress that I thought he had many years of usefulness ahead of him.

GREAT PATRIOT, PRELATE.

Cardinal O'Donnell was known all over the world as a great patriot and a great prelate.

He was conservative, both by nature and by the quality of his office as prelate, nevertheless, he could be very outspoken at times.

He was a man of very forceful character, and when the occasion demanded it he would speak with authority of Irish affairs, for he had known them and had worked in them all his life.

We were old friends. I met him frequently during my Roman visits and he was constantly expressing his admiration for our great country and for the opportunities it gave to the men and women of his race.

HAS DONE NOBLE WORK.

Although he lived all his life in what is called the "Black North"—by that is meant the ultra-Protestant Ulster, which keeps bigotry at a white heat all the time—nevertheless, by the sincerity of his character and his desire to bring harmony into that portion of Ireland which is unique in its makeup, racially, socially and religiously, he won the respect and admiration even of his enemies, who were not his enemies, but the enemies of his race, his religion and his country.

He was a very noble figure and at the processions of the cardinals at the Vatican and at St. Peter's he was a very conspicuous personality.

I am sure that every Irishman and every man of Irish blood in this country will regret his sudden taking away; but after all he has done a noble work, the work of a lifetime, and his work will remain through the years.

CARROLL HOME, DELUGED WITH GIRLS' KISSES

New York, Oct. 22 A.P.).—Earl Carroll, theatrical producer, came home today from Atlanta, arriving in Pennsylvania station a few minutes before noon. He broke into tears when he stepped off the train and found a large gathering of his friends waiting to welcome him.

A score of actresses pushed through the crowd to throw their arms about the producer's neck and welcome him home with kisses.

As one after another embraced him he burst into tears and kept saying over and over "Oh, I'm so glad to be back, I'm so glad to be back."

In the rotunda of the station he posed with his wife who met him as he was released from prison, after serving part of a term for perjury in connection with investigation of his Broadway "bathtub party."

ESCORTED BY POLICE.

The boom of flashlights attracted a crowd of several hundred and as Carroll and his party were escorted by police to their car the throng broke into applause.

Carroll and his brother and wife went to the Park Avenue home of the producer's sister to rest.

Carroll intimated in word sent to reporters that he might be definitely through with the theatrical life in which he rose to quick eminence and from which he moved to the prison surroundings of the Federal penitentiary.

"I'm tired," he said. "I don't know if I can 'come back' or not; I'll know better in a couple of weeks.

"I'm all at sea now and don't seem to be able to pick up the threads where they were cut."

IN PUBLICITY GLARE.

The trip from Atlanta was made through a glare of publicity as brilliant as ever shone along the Broadway, where Carroll climbed to prominence and stepped into the gloom from his notorious bath tub party.

At every station reporters flocked on board and photographers yelled for poses.

MAINE WOMAN'S SLAYER GIVEN LIFE SENTENCE

Portland, Me., Oct. 22 (A.P.).—James P. Kelley, 36, of this city, was convicted in Superior Court today of murder for the fatal stabbing last July of Mrs. Lillian Grace Woodsum Casey, with whom he had been keeping company for two years. The jury was out little more than two hours. Kelley was sentenced to life imprisonment, but his commitment was stayed pending possible appeal.

DUE to a severe storm at sea, affecting radio transmission, the arrival of a fresh installment of Ruth Elder's own story of her brilliant flight and the wrecking of her plane in mid-Atlantic, has been delayed. The installment will be published in the Boston Evening American as soon as it is received.

somewhat improved, and she had been able to talk with him. He added he was more hopeful than he had been since she became critically ill.

The Mayor said he did not engage in an extended conversation with his wife, as he was afraid she was too weak.

He remained at the hospital with Secretary Condon, the others of the party leaving for a much-needed rest.

Mrs. Nichols was in a dying condition at 3 o'clock today. She had been in a coma since yesterday afternoon.

Dr. Williams said Mrs. Nichols had been asleep since 1 o'clock partly because of medicines which he had administered.

He added that, while this condition was restful to the patient, it did not alter the fact that she is still gravely ill.

Mayor Nichols, with his wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick M. Williams, her sister Florence, and his brother, Nathaniel F. P. Nichols, left the hospital shortly after nine o'clock for breakfast and a brief rest. The party also included George H. Johnson, city collector, and the mayor's secretary, Edward F. Condon.

The Mayor's wife is suffering from acute Bright's Disease. The child died after two days of life which was kept in the frail body by oxygen and the heat of an incubator. Because of her illness, Mrs. Nichols was not informed of the loss of the child.

There have been so many telephone calls at the hospital inquiring as to the condition of Mrs. Nichols that a private wire was installed.

WHAT PRICE FOR AN EDUCATION? READ THIS

What price education?

"Honest Abe" splitting fence rails and saving the few-and-far-between pennies for the purchase of books had nothing at all on some of the youths who burn the midnight oil in their quest for an A. B. at our Greater Boston universities.

Students working part or all of their way through Boston University comprise 61 per cent. of the total enrollment, President Daniel L. Marsh revealed in his annual report a few days ago. Behind the mask of that brief statement lies a world of grim determination and sacrifice and romance.

What price education?

Ask George Cormack of Southbridge, for instance. George is 23, a junior at the B. U. College of Business Administration. George will give you the answer: "Seven pints of blood in less than a year and a half."

George Cormack means that in fifteen months he has had seven blood transfusions, giving a pint each time, and receiving $50 a pint or a total of $350 so he may pay his own way through college.

Talk with him and the revelation has more significance. He weighs about 140 pounds, stands about five feet, eight inches in height, is thin faced and dark eyed, and wears glasses.

"There is no sentiment attached to a transfusion with me. It is purely a business proposition. I am lucky enough to have a quality of blood much in demand. I need the money. That's the best way of getting it and I am ready any time to answer a call."

By no stretch of imagination what

WARNS PUBLIC ON 'ILLEGAL' INSURANCE

A warning to the public not to deal with any unlicensed insurance companies in Massachusetts was sounded today by Insurance Commissioner Wesley E. Monk.

From a number of complaints received, the commissioner declared, it is indicated that "the Anchor Insurance Company, Ltd., of England; the Eastern Insurance Company, Ltd., and the Liberty Underwriters, all unlicensed foreign insurance companies, are issuing fire policies to residents of Massachusetts."

Here are some of the reasons why the commissioner says to deal with such firms is "highly dangerous":

They can't be sued in Massachusetts.

They are not under his control or supervision.

There is no assurance of their finacial worth or the fairness of their methods.

In case of a loss that such companies refuse to pay he can render no assistance.

It may be necessary for the insured to go to some foreign state or country to enforce a claim.

Unlicensed companies pay no taxes to Massachusetts and are in unfair competition with licensed companies paying large revenues.

Under the law a person, not the Insured, who negotiates insurance in unlicensed foreign companies is liable to arrest and to payment of a fine of $100 to $500, one-half of which goes to the informant.

STRATON GIVES 'CURE' PROOF

New York, Oct. 22 (A.P.).—Rev. Dr. John Roach Straton, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, will preach a series of twenty sermons, beginning tomorrow, to reveal how faith cured him of a chronic dyspepsia and he will also relate other personal cases of divine healing.

His general topic will be "The True Gospel of the Holy Spirit." He said in a circular today that "all the sermons will be based on the literal scriptures."

"Witnesses will be on hand," the circular reads, "to testify to specific cases of divine healing." These will include Dr. Straton's wife, and their son, Warren, both of whom will testify to manifestations of the spirit they have personally experienced.

Dr. Straton said that in curing himself of dyspepsia through faith he now weighs 170 pounds instead of 135 as formerly.

'COOLIDGE MAY BE DRAFTED,' SAYS ALLEN

Washington, Oct. 22 (A.P.)—The prediction that President Coolidge would be drafted by the Republicans next year unless he issues a definite disclaimer was made by Henry J. Allen, former governor of Kansas, after a call today at the White House.

"I am equally guilty with Senator Pepper," he said, "in believing that President Coolidge will be drafted unless he does something about it.

"I believe that he was entirely sincere when he said in his statement that he did not choose to run, but there comes a time in a man's life when his duty to his country outweighs his personal wishes.

"Mr. Coolidge could carry every county in Kansas with a larger majority than he di before."

WILLIS IN RACE?

Mr. Allen declared he believed Secretary Hoover was the second popular choice, but that he thought from a political standpoint Vice-President Dawes stood the better chance for getting the nomination.

After a call on President Coolidge today, Senator Willis of Ohio issued a statement which covered so many of the present political issues that inquirers asked him if it was a declaration of his candidacy for the Republican Presidential nomination, to which the senator replied that "the statement speaks for itself."

NO BIG TAX CUT.

Beginning with a declaration that there are numerous Republicans who would be able to "defeat the Tammany candidate the Democracy is certain to nominate," Willis said he was in favor of dealing with the Mississippi flood problem "boldly and unequivocally," that he was opposed to the McNary-Haugen bill, and favored restriction of immigration, and declared for strict enforcement of prohibition.

Mr. Willis declared a tax reduction of $400,000,000 as recommended by the United States Chamber of Commerce is out of the question, and that "Congress will do well if it reduces taxes $250,000,000."

Many Passengers of Social Prominence Are Aboard the Palatial French Liner, Ile de France, En Route for the Continent; Willowdale Meet Today

WHEN THE MAGNIFICENT STEAMSHIP ILE DE FRANCE moved out from New York last night on one of those midnight sailings that never fail of color and unusualness, her passenger quota included some interesting members of the younger set responding to the Old World's call. Representative young people are they; Junior Leaguers and Vincentites, who did their brilliant first Winter, then sought the higher learning in college halls, and now go abroad for travel and sightseeing and for study, should the spirit so move.

MISS ELIZABETH OAKES AND MISS MARY FRANCES OAKES, with their relative, Miss Betty Prather, are aboard the new and magnificent liner that is the pride of France. The Misses Oakes are two of the three very attractive girls gracing the Francis J. Oakes family circle, for whom "Southwood," in Brookline, is often en fete, and specially so at Yuletide. Merry Christmas celebrations are the Oakes' piece de resistance, and such a party has marked each daughter's coming out Winter.

SINCE "SOUTHWOOD" HAS MANY CHIMNEYS SANTA CLAUS found parties there much to his liking, just as did the young people bidden to dine and dance in celebration of Xmas. This season, with the family divided between the Old and the New World, it's likely that any celebration of Christmas will be in abeyance. Miss Muriel Bliss, daughter of Elmer Jared Bliss, is a passenger on the Ile de France, who goes abroad to Paris for study at the Sorbonne, and the same steamer takes the Misses Margaret, Edith and Harriet Rantoul of Salem.

SOME YOUNG GIRLS "COME OUT" IN BOSTON AND SOME make their social curtsy in Gotham. A few have the thrill of being presented in both these social centres. But to very few does circumstance vouchsafe debuts in three places. Miss L. Romaine Bristow is one of these thrice favored girls. A preliminary canter through Newport's gay Summertime life, a formal debut in New York and a round of entertainment here is her portion. Her relatives, the Thomas B. Gannetts, entertain this evening with the usual Gannett brilliance at a dinner-dance in honor of Miss Bristow.

OTHER BOSTON KIN, NOTABLY THE B. H. BRISTOW DRAPERS, are doing pleasant things for Miss Bristow during her Boston stay. She is a daughter of the William Bristows of New York. She is down in the Gotham calendar of "What is What for the Buds" as having a reception given for her at the Colony Club on November 18, and a ball at the Ritz on December 3. The Bristow establishment in Newport is in Bellevue avenue.

TO FLEET-FOOTED EQUINES, SUCH AS BAYARD TUCKERMAN'S "Byron," today's meet at Willowdale is one in a succession of like affairs. After dashing over the famous Willowdale course "Byron" is shipped Southward, along with Bayard Warren's "Upsal," to fight a good fight for honors in the Pimlico Meet, set for the first days of November. They are entered in the Manly Memorial, a classic in the annual Fall meet of the Maryland Jockey Club that has much honor and gold for the winner and attracts entries famous on two continents.

FOR THOSE THAT FOLLOW THE HORSES, CELEBRATION OF A Hunt Meet commences on the "night before." To dine and then auction off the horses is as much a part of the meet as the actual racing itself. Last evening the Myopians, famous as hosts, lived up to all expectations at their cheery clubhouse on the eve of the Willowdale meet. As the Myopians stage such an occasion, it is worth traveling many a mile to attend, and sportsmen and women in many cases did just that.

BOSTON IS ABOUT TO SEE ITS BRILLIANT SYMPHONY conductor, Sergei Koussevitsky, in a new role, that of performer on the double bass. Mr. Koussevitsky, heart and soul the musician and heart and soul in sympathy with his fellows in exile, is staging a recital at Symphony Hall, Monday evening, with himself as chief performer and the Russian Students' Fund the beneficiary. To say that musical Boston is all agog over the affair is but putting it mildly.

THE SPONSOR LIST FOR SUCH AN OCCASION IS, OF COURSE, of first-string excellence. It is very long and very imposing and includes such notables as Mrs. I. Tucker Burr, Mrs. Curtis Guild, Mrs. Hinkley Welch, Mrs. Henry Hunnewell, Mrs. Philip L. Saltonstall, Miss Martha Codman, Mrs. Edward Jackson Holmes, the M. Graeme Haughtons, and others of similar importance.

MISS DOROTHY NEYHART OF FRAMINGHAM LOOKS VERY smart in her very correct riding costume as she takes the field of mornings with the Millwood Hounds as M. F. H. The Millwood is fortunate in having a feminine "Master" of Fox Hounds such as Miss Neyhart, and fortunate also in the countryside over which it hunts. At its very door, so to speak, lies mile on mile of splendid hunting country, the woods and fields that give the hounds and horses plenty of "up hill and down dale" for their runs after the fox.

MISS NEYHART IS ONE OF THE DAUGHTERS OF MR. AND MRS. ADNAH NEYHART of "Red Gate Farm" in Framingham. She and her sister, Miss Ruth Neyhart, are thoroughgoing sportswomen In recognition of their talents in this direction, they were John R. Macomber's right hands when he staged his inaugural meet at Racelands, and prior to that they spent some time in Ireland training hunters for that band of sportsmen who make of Bective House, in Meath, a hunting rendezvous. It quite naturally follows that Miss Neyhart is a "Master" of some accomplishment.

POLA NEGRI IN REAL ESTATE BUSINESS

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 22.—The exotic Pola Negri is soon to be seen in a new role and one that is filling her with delight. She is building a new apartment house on Mariposa street, next door to the Ambassador Hotel, and planning each suite with individual attention. Ground will be broken next week for what Pola believes will be an innovation, even in Hollywood.

She has purchased old French furniture—and the entire house will be of French design and architecture. The cost of $620,000, she believes, will be well spent, for Hollywood is going into the apartment business on a lavish scale. Mrs. Tom Ince has built a most artistic apartment hotel called the Villa Carlotta on Franklin avenue and within a few months she will build another across the street.

Pola Negri

Undoubtedly Prince Serge Mdivani, the new husband, influenced Pola to branch out as an apartment house owner. He has gone into the real estate business and Pola says in the last few months he has made more money than she has as an actress.

I don't know whether Pola is being generous or not, but if he makes that amount of money—no wonder real estate promoters are so numerous in this neck of the woods. Pola and her prince are leaving for New York almost immediately for a month in the big city—a little vacation between pictures.

IF Renee Adoree had an astral body that would probably be working too at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, for both Mike Adoree and M-G-M have discovered it is a physical impossibility for an actress to play in two pictures at once.

She was cast for the lead in "Rose Marie," and in Ramon Novarro's next picture. The latter is nowhere near finished and won't be for some time. So—exit Renee and enter Joan Crawford.

Joan has a few assignments ahead herself. She is now finishing "West Point," with William Haines, and after that she is signed for Two McCoy's picture, "The Texas Ranger."

Edmund Goulding, who directs "Rose Marie," really discovered Joan, so he announced his intention of waiting until she can be ready for his picture. There is a whisper that "Anna Karenina," Mr. Goulding's last picture, is a "woe." I do hope M-G-M will have a change of heart and not send Anna out labelled "Love." Shades of Tolstoy!

Joan Crawford

SPEAKING of "Rose Marie," to the music, I am told, will figure largely in the presentation. You just couldn't think of "Rose Marie" without some of those strains of music that made it such a popular operetta. Creighton Hale, by the by, has also been signed for a part. Creighton is a versatile youth who can play a book as convincingly as Harry Langdon. I cannot pay him a greater tribute.

G. O. P. LEADERS NAMED IN N. Y. CENSUS QUIZ

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 22 (I.N.S.)—The names of two Republican leaders of the Legislature, Senator John Knight, majority leader of the Senate, and Fred Hammond, clerk of the Assembly, today were brought into the Moreland investigation of the claim that Mrs. Florence E. S. Knapp, former Secretary of State, wasted $200,000 of the census fund.

Dr. Walter Laidlaw executive secretary of the cities census committee, which filed the charges of mismanagement against Mrs. Knapp testified Knight and Hammond had close connections with the 1925 census. He said Hammond was consultant about the printing of census records and Knight attended conferences when census jobs were discussed.

"I thought Hammond was very much interested in taking the census, inasmuch as he was clerk of the Assembly," Dr. Laidlaw testified. "I learned from Sam Howard that Hammond wanted the census printing done by the zinkograph process."

Dr. Laidlaw testified Mrs. Knapp appointed him an assistant supervisor at $5,000 a year much against his wish and he protested to Knight and Gleason about Mrs. Knapp's plan to appoint the 500 supervisors.

"When Mrs. Knapp offered me the job of assistant supervisor," he said, "she suggested I refrain from telling the cities census committee about it."

2 PRIESTS SAVE SACRAMENT IN $200,000 FIRE

Bridgeport, Conn., Oct. 22 (A.P.)—St. Mary's Roman Catholic church was partly burned today and the loss was estimated by the clergy at close to $200,000.

During the fire Rev. James O'Connor and Rev. John McTigue, curates, and Patrolman Robert Dunnigan, with clothes over their faces, crawled on their hands and knees into the church auditorium in effort to reach the high altar and save the Blessed Sacrament. On nearing the altar they found it had dropped into the basement, but the tabernacle had been thrown to one side on the church floor.

The three men got the tabernacle and began working their way back to the doors. Patrolman Dunnigan collapsed but the priests got to the open air.

A few minutes later a squad of firemen with Patrolman Jack Dunnigan, a "rookie" officer and brother of the missing patrolman, went into the building and began a search. It was Joseph who stumbled over his brother and carried him out. He was rescued to consciousness.

The fire is thought to have been started by the basement furnace. It spread to the woodwork and upwards to the blind attic and then throughout the entire upper part of the structure breaking into the auditorium and also firing the base of the steeple which rises 75 feet above the roof.

For a time it looked as if the steeple might fall and police ordered neighbors and inmates of houses across the street to vacate.

ENVOY HERRICK WANTS TO QUIT

(Copyright, 1927, International News)

Washington, Oct. 22—Myron T. Herrick, American ambassador to France, now 73, has signified to President Coolidge his desire to be relieved of his post as soon as the administration can conveniently choose his successor.

Advancing years and ill health have been ascribed as the causes Ambassador Herrick returned from France in mid-Summer and since that time has undergone two operations. His recovery has been slow and his general condition is such that he has yielded to the advice of friends and relatives to give up his post.

Officially Ambassador Herrick is recuperating from an illness and expects to resume his post some time before the end of the year, but it is understood that if he returns to France at all it will only be to wind up his affairs there.

One of the leading candidates to succeed Herrick is Dwight W. Davis, Secretary of War. Davis is said to have long desired a diplomatic post. He is independently wealthy, and is considered "available."

Another possible candidate is George Wharton Pepper of Pennsylvania, who retired from the Senate following his defeat in the Pennsylvania primary.

SEND WIDOWS OF HEROIC DEAD WITH MOTHERS, WALSH URGES

AVIATOR'S MOTHER TELLS OF VISITS TO HIS GRAVE

By WIN BROOKS

"But I've a rendezvous with death
At midnight in some flaming town
When Spring trips north again this year . . ."

NOT at midnight nor in a flaming town, but on some bright day of Summer next year when the poppies blow in the fields about Waeregheem and "the apple blossoms fill the air" near Thiaucourt, 20,000 Gold Star mothers of America have a rendezvous overseas.

Alan Seeger, Harvard poet, kept his rendezvous with death one flaming midnight as he predicted, when the Foreign Legion stormed Belloy-en-Santerre and the hidden machine guns spit flame and eternity against the darkness.

America's Gold Star mothers, whose sons still lie in the soil of a foreign land, have a different rendezvous to keep next Summer. Not with death. But with their Dead.

The proposal of the Boston Evening American and Hearst papers throughout the country that Congress appropriate a sum to send these mothers across the Atlantic to the graves of their sons, continues to meet with approval at every hand.

The suggestion was set forth that the pilgrimage be made under the direction of the War Department with an escort of women provided by the American Red Cross.

The mothers would visit the graves of the great American military cemeteries at Brookwood in England, at Waeregheem in Belgium, and in France at Bony, Romagne, Fere-en-Tardenois, Belleau, Suresnes and Thiaucourt.

Senator Walsh

United States Senator David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, was one of the first to approve the plan. Senator Walsh's splendid statement follows:

"The suggestion that Congress appropriate sufficient money to send Gold Star mothers to France next Summer to visit the graves of their sons is highly commendable and patriotic.

"The benefit of such a pilgrimage as outlined by the Hearst papers is inestimable. It would be a striking and powerful gesture on the part of our nation in the direction of world peace, for it would accentuate tremendously the horrors, heartaches and human costs and sacrifices of war.

"I would suggest broadening the scope of the pilgrimage by including the wives as well as the mothers of the martyred dead who are interred in France."

The graves of 4,141 American fighting men are located in St. Mihiel Cemetery near Thiaucourt. There the guns no longer sound, and the shells no longer scream. There is quiet there, and a great peace. And there, also, is the grave of David E. Putnam, of Boston, first lieutenant in the air service and one of America's foremost aces of the war.

Mrs. Fred Putnam

Putnam was killed at Limy. He was shot twice through the heart in a fight over the German lines when he went to the assistance of an Allied flier attacked by eight Germans. Despite his wounds he piloted his ship out of enemy territory and landed safely. He was found dead in his undamaged plane, his hands on the controls. France gave him every honor it has within its privilege to bestow.

Today Putnam's mother, Mrs. Fred Putnam, joined her voice to those raised in acclaim of the Gold Star mother pilgrimage plan.

"Since the day in June, three years ago, when I visited for the first time at the grave of my son, I have hoped and prayed that every Gold Star mother in America might visit the grave of her beloved, gaining there the comfort, the satisfaction, that only such a personal visit may give."

Quiet-spoken, unassuming and wearing no outward badge of the pride that must be hers, Mrs. Putnam told of her most recent visit to the grave of her son when she attended the Paris convention of the American Legion as the guest of Crosscup-Pishon Post.

"It is a marvelous plan," she continued, "and one that has been foremost in my mind for a long time. And it would be a beautiful thing if there could be held in Paris, on their arrival, one great service for the Gold Star mothers of the country."

"What does a mother feel, standing there for the first time at the last resting place of her heroic son?" I asked.

Quite simply she answered: "A mother does not stand there. She kneels."

LORD DEFENDS DEAD COUNTESS FOR ACTIONS

cables is rather steep for a school teacher," he said. But urgency demanded it. So, I have not had any direct communications from the French police. My lawyer is attending to that. He has warned me not to make public any more of my wife's letters. I have more than 900 of them and I have put them in a safety deposit vault by advice of counsel."

The young husband, highly-strung, super-sensitive, dapper and cultured was so overcome that he fainted in his apartment on Beacon Hill while being interviewed by a group of newspapermen. They had to loosen his collar and dash cold water on his face as he lay motionless in an arm chair.

"That's the second time today," he said. "Didn't quite go under the first time, but came near it just as the clock of school. I'm about used up over this thing. It's come so suddenly, and there are so many innuendoes and so much rot and gossip and I haven't eaten or slept.

"But I'm going to meet and deny any aspersions that may be aimed at my dead wife. They must not malign her. She was too fine a woman for that. It's cruel. They don't know what they are talking about.

"If," he says they're wrong. Klun fell and the whole pack of them. Nobody can tell me that my wife was unfaithful. She was a dutiful and devoted wife. True, she had ideas and strange moods at times. She lived a life apart from the ordinary sons, persons of culture. She was ever seeking new thrills. I had often warned her.

"It may sound absurd if I say now that for a full year I had a premonition. I was conscious of a strange foreboding so vivid that often I hesitated before opening her letters. And I got the last which she penned last Friday.

"There are three letters which I plan to publish to refute the silly rumors and to show my wife as she really was, a woman among women, but understood by few. I have called my lawyer asking advice as to these letters. When I get his reply I shall make them public to show the true status of the Countess.

"To be sure she knew Isadora Duncan. They had much in common. My wife worshipped at the shrine of rhythm and music. She lived for her music. She passionately loved her violin. Therefore such an exponent of rhythm and grace as Isadora Duncan naturally appealed to the Countess, but I happen to know that she did not share Isadora's views as to love and such subjects.

"My wife felt that such views or hobbies were Isadora Duncan's own concern and right. She would not cross her on such matters. But my wife detested free love and such views. She loved flowers and nature, and above all her music. She would play on public platform and stage before crowds and then hasten away to bury herself in the solitude of the country.

"She loathed crowds, but she liked meeting certain types of people whose intellect and talent appealed to her.

"She loved children. Her big ambition was to found a home for children, where as she used to express it, 'they can dance and sing all day and go to their sleep and awake singing.'

CONDUCTED SCHOOL

"Yes, she wanted children of her own. We both did. We were always in close touch with children. You see the countess and I conducted a private school for children at Nice. We had twenty-two or more pupils, all the children of wealthy families and of various nationalities, among them two colored boys.

"We enjoyed this instruction of children just as I do my class in Boston school. My wife meanwhile carried on her music and had special pupils in dancing. She was about to start a conservatory when death interrupted her plans. I have her circular now among my effects.

"She was ambitious. She often said the only persons in all the world who thoroughly understood her were her mother and me. That's why I've ordered her to be buried in the lot beside her mother. Talk of a $15,000 funeral is rot, like much more I have been printed and said. She wouldn't sanction an exhibition,even if we were silly enough to think of it.

"The countess will have a burial befitting her station. No, we don't believe in cremation. When I was there I engaged the lot. You see in France you must lease burial lots for 100 years. Her mother died soon after I arranged for the lot and now Mimi will go there, too.

"My wife always signed her letters 'Mimi.' She addressed me as 'Dearest Husband' or just 'Dearest.' 'Dearest Friend' just as her moods dictated, but invariably closed, 'Forever and Ever, Mimi.' Often when I returned she would have the room flooded with flowers and would leave a delightful little note hoping I would enjoy them. Her rooms were always full of flowers.

A CREATURE OF MOODS

"She surrendered to her moods, sitting thinking or spilling her very nature on paper in an outpouring of correspondence. The hundreds of letters show her fine nature and thoughts.

"I loved her and she loved me. We were not estranged. We were not to be divorced. It is true that I have been served with divorces papers, but let the gossips say what they like. Mimi's letters are the best evidence. The gossips tried to make much out of the transaction when I bestowed the legal right of my wife through court channels, to use mine without bothering with my indorsement.

"Of course we have slight differences at times. When I was stationed with the army as chief clerk in the surgeon general's department I had a slight disagreement with my wife over her hair. She had beautiful long hair and I wanted her to have it bobbed.

"She didn't want to bob it so she said she didn't like my mustache, any more than I liked her hair. We compromised by my cutting her hair and she trimming my mustache.

"The French law is queer in this respect as to husband and wife. I suppose the gave rise to divorce rumors. I did not abandon my wife. I returned to my home in Fall River, nearly four years ago with the full consent of the countess. The warm climate did not agree with me. The doctors advised change.

GENEROUS TO FAULT

"But we kept in close communication and I gave her a weekly allowance ever since, despite the fact that she had a large fortune of her own and never had to worry about money matters. The countess was generous and charitable to a fault.

"She did things that were misunderstood often and as often got 'no thanks.' For example, I can recall when she paid the hospital bill for Klupfel's wife, not because it was Klupfel's wife but because she felt the act necessary. She would have done it for anybody else's wife as quickly.

Slayer Hewitt Must Die

Jefferson, O., Oct. 22 (I. N. S.)—Floyd Hewitt, Conneaut youth, convicted of the murder of Fred Brown, Jr., at North Conneaut, last February, must die in the electric chair November 25. The Court of Appeals so decreed in a decision handed down here today which upheld Hewitt's conviction.

MYSTIC RITE OF ISIS BARED BY LORD'S WIFE

The mystic rites performed by the Agni Fire Worshippers before a supposedly enchanted statue of Isis, goddess of the moon, were described to Horace Wilfred Lord of Boston in a letter written by his wife, the Alain Countess Marcelle Verner-Lord, who attended the love-cult meetings out of curiosity, according to her husband.

The countess was invited by Isadora Duncan to take part in the ceremonies by playing her violin for the dancing debut of 12 girl members of the worshippers at the "Feast of the White Lotus," according to the letter.

MOONLIGHT CEREMONY.

The ceremonies began at 10 o'clock in the evening on a moonlight night, near the home of the countess, at a spot where the perfume of jasmine, black narcissus and tuberoses filled the air.

Great bunches of mistletoe clung to a huge hollow oak tree before which the rites were conducted.

Eight tall torchbearers led the procession to the tree and the "worshippers" formed in groups of seven on two sides, each dressed in a white toga with a band of white around the head. They were sandals tied with seven knots. The ceremonies began with their chanting of "Zoom, soom, zoom."

EACH ANOINTED.

They waved back and forth from the waist as they chanted their weird refrain. Then the leader, known by the name of Goldberg, appeared and, after a boy removed his sandals, he "anointed" each while chanting an echo of the general chorus.

He carried a large ball of mistletoe. A boy brought in a polished oak tray of vegetables with earth still clinging to the roots and handed it to Goldberg who placed it on the "altar" amid the handclapping of his followers. He threw a pinch of salt into the fire where castor beans turned "to chase away evil spirits."

The groups of seven then divided into triangles and all swayed from side to side until they fell to the ground exhausted. Goldberg then walked among them giving them pieces of raw vegetables.

All then fell into what seemed to be a trance which lasted until the sun rose.

CHALIAPIN'S BRAIN WILLED TO MUSEUM

Leningrad, Oct. 22 (A.P.).—A museum of brains for studying the sources of talent and genius has been sanctioned by the Soviet government. The brains of three celebrities are already in the care of Professor Vladimir Bechterev, psychiatrist and neurologist, he told the Associated Press.

They are those of Anton Rubenstein, pianist, who died in 1894; Dmitri Mendeleef, naturalist, who died in 1907, and Alexander Dohnt, writer and priest, who died last September. Bechterev declared that the Russian bass, Feodor Chaliapin, has willed his brain to the new institution.

GRAYSON PLANE FORCED BACK SECOND TIME

Old Orchard, Me., Oct. 22 (A.P.)—"We just couldn't fly down the wind, that's all," explained Mrs. Frances W. Grayson, the Long Island aviatrix, who hopes to be the first woman to fly across the Atlantic Ocean, as the amphibian plane, The Dawn, taxied out of the water and up the beach here today after a second false start this week for Copenhagen at 6:15 a. m.

The return decision was made when the plane reached a point two miles beyond Cape Elizabeth lighthship, a dozen miles east of here. It was not more than two feet above the water, and making nearly 128 miles an hour. It was estimated by Pilot Wilmer Stultz. Navigator Brice Goldsborough pulled the valve wires, releasing 260 gallons of gasoline, and thus gained altitude to return to the beach.

A destroyer of the Coast Guard, which had stood offshore during the attempted flight, followed The Dawn back until the plane was ashore. Goldsborough climbed to the top wing and signalled the destroyer with semaphore flags that all was well.

Pilot Stultz, with whom the final decision on the flight of "The Dawn" rests, decided that a third hopoff today would be foolhardy and the next time for departure was set for early tomorrow morning.

the Rev. Peter J. Bergen, C. S. P., who was ordained to the priesthood in Rome last April, will celebrate his first solemn high mass tomorrow at 9:15 a. m. Father Bergen is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Bergen of No. 40 Porter street, Somerville.

For a year he attended Boston College and then for seven years studied at the Paulist College in Washington, D. C. In October of last year he went to Rome to complete his studies with the Paulist Fathers.

MRS. STUART IN FIGHT TO KEEP HORSE, "WHIPPET"

The controversy between Mrs. Alice Stuart of Medford, and Forrest T. Roche of Leominister over the show horses "Nicholas J. Hayes" and "The Whippet" on which Judge Lummus in Dedham court made a ruling two weeks ago, was reopened today when Attorney Frank McCarthy, for Mrs. Stuart, filed in Norfolk Court, a bill or review, and requested a new trial. The motion will be heard in Boston, October 31.

At the hearing before Judge Lummus it was revealed that Mrs. Stuart purchased "The Whippet" from Roche, giving him in trade, "Nicholas J. Hayes." Roche contending that the Hayes horse was lame and not in good condition returned the animal to Mrs. Stuart's stables and asked the court to order her to return "The Whippet" to him.

Judge Lummus made a personal examination of "Nicholas J. Hayes," and ordered Mrs. Stuart to return "The Whippet," within thirty days.

Blind Tiger Raiders in Brighton Find Police Chief There

Your never know who you'll find in places you raid these days and three Brighton officers discovered this when they found the chief of police of a nearby town in an alleged "blind tiger" in Commonwealth avenue, Allston.

Testimony in Brighton Court today brought out the fact that when Ralph Smith of Winchester street, Brookline, and Jacob A. Uretzsky, Harry Leiter and Morris Leiter, all of Commonwealth avenue, were held each in $1,000 for a hearing October 29 on a charge of keeping and exposing liquor for sale.

Sergeant Muldoon, with Special Officers Hamlet and Finn of the Brighton Station, made the raid and told of their amazement at finding the police chief present. No charge was made against him.

'I'LL DIE LIKE A MAN!' DOOMED WOMAN SAYS

Chicago, Oct. 22 (I.N.S.)—Mrs. Catherine Cassler, the brazen little housewife sentenced to die on the gallows Friday morning, today consented to commute her imprisonment if she would confess to the murder of William Lindstrom, the Swede, whom the State charges for his insurance.

Her pride, Mrs. Cassler says, will not allow her to ask for clemency. It is believed governor Small would commute her sentence to life imprisonment if she would confess him.

"I'll die like a man," she said. "I prefer death to life in the penitentiary. I'm only praying for justice. If it is to come on the gallows, I can die like any man."

Then she smiled and creased the folds of her blue dress.

"I've made all arrangements for my funeral," she said in a steady voice. "I've written it all down—what I'm to wear, where I'm to be buried.

"My son Edward will get my jewels. My mother will get other little things. My husband will get my insurance."

"But," she smiled, "I'm not sure I'm going to die Friday; I'm confident that before the week is out Lillian Fraser and Loreen Patrick, who are serving life terms for confessing to the murder of William Lindstrom, will absolve me.

"Only God, two persons and myself know that I am not guilty.

"We have only once to die," she said, philosophically, pushing a strand of bobbed hair away from her eyes, "then it's all over. Oh far better than a life of sorrow and restrictions. There'll be no silliness about it—I'll go bravely with a prayer on my lips. I don't want sympathy—I abhor it now as I have all my life."

OIL "PLOT" TRIAL HALTED FOR JUDGE'S DECISION

Washington, Oct. 22 (I.N.S.).—The Fall-Sinclair conspiracy trial rested over the week-end for Justice Frederick Siddons to decide the question of admitting into evidence the testimony Sinclair gave the Senate Oil Probe Committee.

Zevely, visited the ranch of Ex-Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall at Three Rivers, New Mexico, for the express purpose of "seeing him about Teapot Dome."

TOWN PAYS FOR FAILING TO PREVENT KLAN RIOTS

Worcester, Oct. 22 (A.P.).—Because the town of Clinton failed to prevent riotous mobs of anti-Klan fanatics from attacking and damaging the property of law-abiding citizens in violation of a State law against "riotous and tumultuous" assemblage, counsel for that town has effected a settlement without trial in Supreme Court of the case of Arthur M. Hewitt of Westboro who sued for damage done his automobile.

CAROL QUIT HIS LOVE TO RULE?

By WILLIAM P. CARNEY

Copyright 1927 by International News Service.

Paris, Oct. 22.—While wild rumors from Berlin, Vienna and Bucharest circulated today that former Crown Prince Carol of Roumania had deserted Magda Helene Lupescu, his beautiful red-haired companion, Carol and Magda were spending a quiet day at the former's newly purchased chateau 100 miles from Paris.

The report had been that Carol was on his way back to Roumania.

"It is all a lot of rot," exclaimed Carol. "This is not the first time my earnest efforts to have privacy caused rumors of my whereabouts to be spread.

"I can only repeat what I told you last Winter when newspapers over the world had me at Rapollo. I was never away a single day from the villa I was occupying at that time at Neuilly."

BEEBES CANCEL SCHOOL OFFER

The Beebe family of Malden today withdrew an offer to furnish complete, at a cost of from $50,000 to $75,000, the new junior high school at Pleasant street and Highland avenue if the school should be named the Beebe School in honor of the late Marcus Beebe, who formerly owned the site.

This withdrawal disclosed to the city authorities for the first that such an offer had been made. It is believed that members of the building committee knew of the offer, but chose to keep it secret for awhile.

The reason for the withdrawal is that a movement is under way to name it the Leonard School in honor of a deceased teacher, Laura A. Leonard, and the Beebe family did not wish to have a controversy over the matter. Those who started the movement for the name Leonard knew nothing of the Beebe offer.

Well, Well, Not So Dumb!

The remarkable philosophy of that precious little worldling, Lorelei, in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes", at the Majestic, is crisply expressed in her shrewd precept to the romping Dorothy, "and remember, a kiss on the hand is all very well, but a diamond bracelet lasts forever."

STAGE AND SCREEN

Wealthy, But Not Healthy.

While Julius Tannen, sage of the "Vanities," at the Colonial, is not one of those who live in glass houses, he is, nevertheless, of the firm opinion that a sure way to riches would be for him to secure the empty bottle concession at his hotel. Now, just where is Mr. Tannen staying?

DOWNTOWN DRAMA MARKS TIME WHILE WORLD PREMIERE LAYS HANDS ON COPLEY

ARE OUR GRANDMAS SAFE? Not in that frisky farce, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," at the Majestic. For here is Mrs. Jacqua Martin (as Mrs. Spofford) being led completely astray by June Walker as Lorelei Lee.

FRANCES MARCHANT, of the "Vanities" at the Colonial, shows you how simple it is to attend to an itchy knee. This attitude is also recommended for chilblains and dandruff.

LOUDER PLEASE! Anybody can tell this is a good story, but anybody can't tell it like Eddie Dowling. This happy group was photographed in an odd corner of the Tremont during "Honeymoon Lane" time.

OPPOSITES ATTRACT, else the bounding bagman, "Poodles" Hanneford, would not be near the desirable Dostrez Tabor. ("Circus Princess," Shubert.)

"TAKE IT FROM ME," brags the bustling song and dance boy in "Broadway." "I got personality." "Yeah!" exclaims the girl, "and you also got an awful swelled head." (Ramona Kogan and Walter Glass at the Plymouth.)

TIME REWARDS ITS FAITHFUL COMICS

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

IN the distribution of its favors, the theatre often takes to reluctant deliberation in extremely worthy instances. However, when the theatregoer finally does place a friendly conclusion upon some act, or upon some actor, the reward is generally lavish enough to make up for the years of toil and waiting. In a measure this has been the experience of Moran and Mack, reigning kings of comedy in blackface, who are now giving their talents to Earl Carroll's "Vanities" at the Colonial. It appears to be the vogue now to greet these droll gentlemen with much gusto and acclaim and to depart from their entertainment very much refreshed.

ANYONE who has listened to Mr. Mack's quaint observations on the futility of being the early bird can hardly be expected to hold himself in precise and solemn dignity. That bit of banter between the two comedians is unquestionably the season's high spot in low comedy, but it may be recalled that for perhaps ten years these same comedians presented the same act in their own dry fashion, and though they amused they did not excite. It was only last season, while "Vanities" skirted Broadway, that the act passed from ordinary success to positive riot. The theatre surely exhibited severe and rare reluctance in pouring its reward upon this pair of highly gifted fun makers.

In moving from passing success to sensational popularity, Moran and Mack may be said to have accomplished the feat on the turn of a talking machine record and the laughs of invisible radio listeners. These mediums of indoor entertainment brought forth new and faithful boosters for the simple, homely arts of the variety theatre, and the boosters have proved veritable Rotarians in their support. Moran and Mack were as enjoyable five years ago as they are today, but five years ago there were no phonographic records to carry them into every American home nor had the loud speakers taken up their mirthful story.

THE business of holding the burlesque form of entertainment together in happiness and prosperity has dropped a heavy hand upon its sponsors. It is no trade secret that all has not been well during the past three or four seasons, and internal experiments, aimed at uplift and improvement, have not brought forth the expected results. For a new experiment in the interest of brighter and better days, the Columbia Amusement Company and the Mutual Burlesque Association, formally mortal enemies, have joined forces in a co-operative plan of operation which is to serve as a tonic for rejuvenation. The effect of the new arrangement is not expected to materially disturb the situation in Boston, but in smaller cities, where Columbia and Mutual have been making faces at each other, the number of theatres will be reduced and non-competitive playing schedules will be the rule.

Fred Niblo Is Self Made Man of the Movies

Few more active careers in the field of motion pictures can be recorded than that of Fred Niblo, director of "Ben-Hur," coming Monday to Loew's State.

Niblo was born in York, Nebraska, left an orphan at fourteen, and since then he has made his own fortune. Going on the stage, he became a star in association with his brother-in-law, George Cohan, whose sister, Josephine Cohan, he married. After the death of Josephine Cohan he was married to Enid Bennett. Niblo began his picture making activities in the late Spring of 1918. Since then he has made thirty-eight productions.

"Les Miserables" in Film Coming to Colonial

The highly heralded production of Victor Hugo's mighty work, "Les Miserables," made by Film de France and presented in America by Carl Laemmale, will have its Boston premiere at the Colonial Theatre Monday evening, October 31. The engagement is for three weeks only, and after the opening night the performance will be given twice daily.

Universally acknowledged as one of the most powerfully dramatic examples of fiction produced by man, this work of Hugo's has in part and in whole been utilized for the stage and screen many times. Meritorious as have been the majority of these offerings, no such thorough efforts have been indulged as has actuated the producers of this spectacle.

Opera Diva

CCE GLADE will sing Amelia in San Carlo's "Aida" at the Opera House Monday evening.

FOURTH BILL AT ELKS

The fourth musical revue at the Elks Roof Garden opens Monday night.

This company of players will in all probability outshine the casts of the previous revues. It is headed by Charlotte Allen, prima donna, who has been featured the past week at the Metropolitan Theatre. Miss Allen has appeared in many of the John Murray Anderson stage productions.

On the same bill will be featured Dorothy Cola, chief comedienne of the revue. Miss Cola has appeared in many of the largest musical successes, featuring in "Tip-Toes," "Wildflower," "The Dream Girl" and other Broadway shows.

Other attractions include a chorus of six dancing dolls.

Joe Rines and his broadcasting orchestra will furnish the music for the entire evening, not only for the revue numbers and specialties, but also for the general dancing.

George Copeland, Pianist, Returns to Boston

George Copeland, the remarkable pianist who first made known to Boston the beauties of the modern French and Spanish literature of piano music, announces a program of great interest for his return recital in Symphony Hall on Sunday afternoon, October 30. It will include First Movement of Italian Concerto by Bach; Pastoral, and Capriccio by Scarlatti; Ballade No. 1 by Chopin; Etudes Symphoniques, by Schumann; Cants Magis No. V, and Ocell triet, by Mompou; Danse de Puck, La soiree dans Grenade, and Minstrels, by Debussy; Danse Iberienne, by Nin; Cantio Famenco, and Tientos, by Infante.

Recital on Contra Bass by Koussevitzky Monday

Rudolph Gang, pianist recently conductor of the St. Louis Orchestra, as well as other assisting musicians, are giving their services for the benefit double-bass recital of Serge Koussevitzky in Symphony Hall, next Monday evening. Boston has never before heard a double-bass virtuoso and may never again, since Mr. Koussevitzky's arduous duties as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra leave him little time to play his chosen instrument.

CROWDS HAIL SAN CARLO

The second Verdi opera of the week, "La Traviata," was given by the San Carlo Company at the Boston Opera House last night. In contrast with "Rigoletto," which was given on Tuesday night, and which is a drama of passion, "La Traviata" deals with similar sentiments, but with a lighter touch. Yet in both cases Verdi has so aptly set the music that neither shows the slightest tendency to wane in popularity. Last night's audience almost filled the house.

Tina Paggi made a charming Violetta, in voice as in appearance. Franco Tafuro was almost as successful with the part of Alfredo. The elder Germont was played by Mario Valle, whose singing has been a notable feature of several performances. Frances Morcsini as Flora, Beatrice Altieri as Annina, Francesco Curci as Gastone, Luigi de Cesare as Baron Douphol, and Natale Cervi as Doctor Grenvil completed the cast.

Films' "European Type" Is Native American

Hollywood's most foreign appearing actor happens to be a native American. His name is Lucien Prival, a comparative newcomer to the screen whose latest film appearance is in "American Beauty," Billie Dove's most recent starring vehicle at the Washington Street Olympia.

Although born in New York City, Prival was educated in Berlin and Vienna and lived there the greater part of his life. He took up a career on the stage in Europe and returned to New York a short time ago where his distinctive personality and ability as an actor won him a long-term contract with First National Pictures.

As Prival is almost an exact double for Erich von Stroheim, the famous and temperamental director, he has often played a burlesque of this genius in pictures.

REISMAN CONCERT

The Sunday afternoon concert in Symphony Hall on November 20 will be given by Leo Reisman. The leader, well known horseboots, will conduct his augmented orchestra of thirty-five musicians.

'LIL' IS NOT PLAYING HERSELF

In "Broadway," at the Plymouth, Helen Raymond is that raucous, fat, old, wise-cracking prima donna, "Lil" Rice." She is a passe cabaret queen —rough, tough, risque. Hot pursuit of "Lil" one evening led up several flights of stairs to her dressing room at the Plymouth. What a climb— How could "Old Lil" manage it every evening—she being short of breath and weighing at least 200. But "LIL" managed. Her breath, it turned out, is in the marvelous control that only a trained singer acquires. Her excess weight, it also turned out, peels off with her stage costume. A pink, ruffled, padded undeslip gives her the advantage of sixty extra pounds.

Helen Raymond

By the time "Lil's" bedizened cabaret costume was replaced by a green jersey sports frock, and Lil's faded peroxide marcel had come off, leaving a chaste coiffure of dark brown hair, there was little left of "Lil." Even her speaking voice suffered a complete transformation. The declasse diva of the night clubs had become a young, alert woman who looked like anything in the world except a Broadway denizen. Hence, Helen Raymond is not playing herself in "Broadway."

"I'm a character actress," she announced with slight asperity when discreetly questioned on this point. "I never 'play myself.' I've been played two characters that were alike, and hope I'll never have to."

HOFMANN-WERRENRATH

Two noted artists to give recitals in Symphony Hall next month are Josef Hofmann, who will play on Sunday afternoon, November 6, and Reinald Werrenrath, who will sing on Sunday afternoon, November 13. The famous pianist and baritone are each then to make their only appearance of the season in Boston.

PROLETARIAN MUSIC AT SYMPHONY

By MOSES SMITH.

The symphony concerts of this week furnish ample evidence that the musical season is well under way. First exhibit is the character of the program which contains one novelty never before heard in this country, a suite from Prokofieff's new "Ballet of Steel"; a Haydn symphony in G major, for eighteenth century diversion; Ravel's lovely "Mother Goose" suite, and Loeffler's "Pagan Poem."

A second exhibit is the attitude of the Friday afternoon audience, which was politely attentive and equally politely applausive towards the music rendered. If it had any preference it was toward Loeffler's work, a friendly greeting to a neighbor who has written full-voiced and expressive music.

Prokofieff's suite brought to a head the problem of playing ballet music in the concert hall. Some of this music can get along without the action on the stage id still be understood. The Russian's latest score cries aloud for the accompanying miming. The music is suggestive, unquestionably. But suggestive of what? Often it seemed barren, but anyone who has heard Prokofieff's other work knows that he is not barren. The explanation must be that in this proletarian ballet he has subdued music to action.

It was good to hear again Ravel's exquisitely modulated children's pieces. Mr. Koussevitzky is an able interpreter of Ravel. Yesterday, with the help of his great orchestra, he was an inspired interpreter. In the first and last movements of the Haydn symphony he was also at his best, though some might quarrel over the speed of the finale. But the largo was fitfully played, with not sufficient definiteness of tempo. And the same thing was true of the minuet.

Loeffler seems destined to go down in history as a very sensitive musician. In his place played yesterday, for which Bernard Zighera played the piano solo and Louis Speyer, the English horn, the Medfield composer brings to bear his first-rate technique and occasional inspiration. But the listener has a feeling that the subject chosen is not one really set to musical illustration.

ALWAYS ON TIME

CHARLES HECTOR, musical director at Loew's Orpheum, keeps tabs on the orchestra and, unlike the careless night watchman they tell about, is never off the beat. Cartoonure by Charlie Schmidt.

MORNING GLORIES

STARTING THE DAY ALL WRONG, Shirley O'Hara and Adolphe Menjou in "A Gentleman Of Paris" at the Metropolitan, coldly ignore each other at breakfast. Date of divorce will be announced later.

SWEET CIDER DAYS

NO KICK COMING, the stuff's harmless, so Rockliffe Fellowes need have no fears for Jean Taylor's hospitable brew. See this in "The Satin Woman"—at the Modern and Beacon.

Don't Ask Her Another!

Martha Morton, of "Honeymoon Lane," at the Tremont, recently bought an automobile. Like many new drivers, she was indiscreetly proud of her knowledge of its mechanism until, "What's a carburetor?" asked Dowling. Quoths Martha, "I know, that's something to clean things with."

STAGE AND SCREEN

Rattling the Heton.

"Poodles" Hanneford, of "The Circus Princess," at the Shubert, finds it impossible to live down the gust ring. For generations there haveyas been circus riders in his farmily—h his great-grandfather down. "Poodles'mself was virtually born aboard a horse.

GAY REVELS, HARI DRAMA AND COY COMEDY FLUTTER JAUNTILY IN SCREENLAND

THE SLAVE IN JUDGMENT. In that thrilling spectacle, "Ben Hur," at Loew's State, the captive Jew faces his persecutor. Condemned as a galley slave, Ramon Novarro, in the title role, thrown discretion aside and boldly defies the Roman chieftan (Frank Currier).

SOFT! Good fortune still pursues Lloyd Hughes in the films. Here he is again in support of the gorgeous Billie Dove in "The American Beauty" at the Washington Street Olympia all next week.

BEST FOOT FORWARD, or is it? We shall see next week at the Keith-Albee Boston when Olive Borden steps out as the frivolous, fortune-hunting "Joy Girl."

SOMETHING WRONG HERE, must be a mistake somewhere, Tom Mix in jail! And is Dorothy Dwan the fair jailer? The small boys are going to see about all this in "Silver Valley" at the Scollay Square.

CALAMITY! The installment man must be coming. Clive Brook and Evelyn Brent cutely clinch and cringe in "Underworld," crime shocker, at the Fenway.

THE SILENT DRAMA'S BAREFOOT BOY

By LEO GAFFNEY.

WHEN the first dim film shadow squirmed feebly on the first white screen, the silent drama giddily reflected the world through colored glasses—bifocal style. When you looked up, Virtue came glowingly into view. When you looked down, Folly assailed your eyesight. When the stars came out, one by one, some put on Virtue's crown, others reached for Folly's grinning mask. And the celebrities proceeded to sort themselves into heroes and heroines, villains and "vamps."

FOR many years picture players were as standardised as Ford parts. Variations were unwelcome and new models seldom appeared In character, the virtuous were always so painfully good—and the villainous never had any fun either. An actor was just a "type" and there was no way of getting around it.

WHILE the precious film favorites are still being chosen with more than a passing regard for "type," the familiar restrictions are easing up, permitting Adolphe Menjou to be "A Gentleman of Paris" at the Metropolitan without toadying to any of the old standards. On the screen he is neither hero nor villain, never very good and never very bad. If Mr. Menjou seems for a moment to run with Folly, the situation is just funny, not wicked. He is gradually eliminating, by ridicule, the old-fashioned rapscallion of the sawmill melodrama.

ON the feminine side of the new-style star roster is Olive Borden, to be seen next week at the Keith-Albee Boston as "The Joy Girl." With talents that so readily fit into a bathing suit, Miss Borden, a few years ago, would have found herself limited to the type of role played by Theda Bara—slinky sirens and the like. Now, she is allowed to go frisking around Palm Beach—as she does in "The Joy Girl"—playing the ukulele and hunting a rich husband. All this is regarded by an amusedly tolerant public as the perfectly normal actions of a modern flapper. And while such gay deportment may be hardly set up as a model for all young ladies, still it is a vast improvement over the "vamps."

HOWEVER slowly, progress in the films is being made. Many outworn actions are on the way out. In better grade pictures the old-style villains of both sexes are nearly exhausted. If only the heroes and heroines would move on, too! But good Dame Drama—still seeing with double vision—keeps a watchful gaze on her children. Once in a while she stops in her knitting and glares severely over her spectacles at them, for they are evidencing strange symptoms. In these moments she catches her precious charges acting suspiciously like human beings! Thinks the alarmed lady it must be that new Realism boy who's been hanging around here lately.

THE anxious madame's fears are justified. This stray urchin is molesting her darlings—and making them like it. No one knows where he came from, but he is gaining friends rapidly. In the Russian film, "Potemkin," he has things all to himself. Not even a featured player of any kind does he allow; not one "star." Let's watch this chap; the kid's clever, ambitious, and he means business.

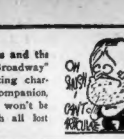
Fie, Fie, Mr. Cannon!

The artistic members of Mr. Clive's company at the Copley are nothing if not industrious. For, here is Norman Cannon, busily enough engaged with many performances of "Murray Hill," dashing off a three-act farce under the intriguing title of "He Walked in Her Sleep."

STAGE AND SCREEN

An Appalling Calamity.

Alluding to the Chicago gangsters and the gay shindig they attend during "Broadway" at the Plymouth, one wise-cracking character exclaims to his roughneck companion, "This party, coming off tonight, won't be no songfest; that Chicago bunch all lost their voices asking for bail."



Ethel Barrymore Tells of Her First Stage Fright

Ethel Barrymore, who has returned to high comedy in W. Somerset Maughan's "The Constant Wife," coming to the Wilbur on Monday night, October 31, inherits not only the comedy sense but also the voice of her grandmother, Mrs. John Drew. It was Mrs. Drew, in her famous role of Mrs. Malaprop, who first gave Ethel an opportunity to appear in a professional company. The story is told that, confronted with the prospect of facing an audience which had come to see her father Maurice Barrymore, and her grandmother in "The Rivals," Ethel timidly made the remark that she wondered whether she would "ever get through with it."

Ethel Barrymore

"Through with it!" Mrs. Drew exclaimed in the tones with which she excoriated Sir Lucius in the duel scene. "Get through with it! Of course you'll get through with it. Aren't you my granddaughter?

FAMILIAR FACES IN THE NEW WEEK'S ARTISTIC VENTURES

FLORA MAUD GADE, sprightly ingenue, will be seen in "Smilin' Through" at the St. James.

'Rose Marie' Prima Donna Never Tires of Her Job

To many laymen the life of an actress may mean nothing more than one memorization after another, but Beulah Berson, the dark-haired prima donna in "Rose-Marie," due at the Boston Opera House Monday evening, October 31st, assures us that an actress' likes and dislikes of her particular role has everything to do with personal success. In "Rose-Marie," she says, there is a romance that runs through the entire play. It is a virile story set to thrilling and stirring music. The scenery and settings are beautiful, and the exhilarating score simply makes the cast sing, not in a boresome manner, but in a joyous and happy mood. There is an enthusiasm that reaches across the footlights from the performers to the audience until everyone is eagerly interested in each line of the play.

Beulah Berson

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN SATURDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1927

SECOND SECTION

Record Crowd Sees Crimson-Green Clash

110,000 EYES will be on Capt. Charlie Pratt of Harvard in the Stadium battle with Dartmouth today.

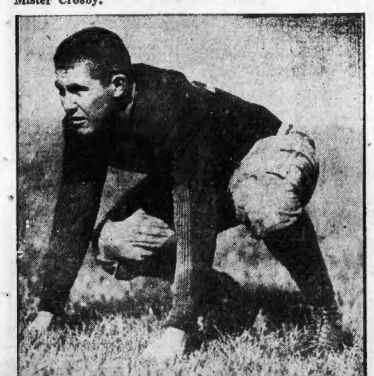
HUB'S PRIDE. Capt. Bob MacPhail of Dartmouth, now a resident of Arlington and formerly of Somerville.

FIRST BIG TEST for Everett Donaghy, Harvard sophomore, comes this afternoon. The Dorchester boy will be called upon to do most of the kicking for the Crimson.

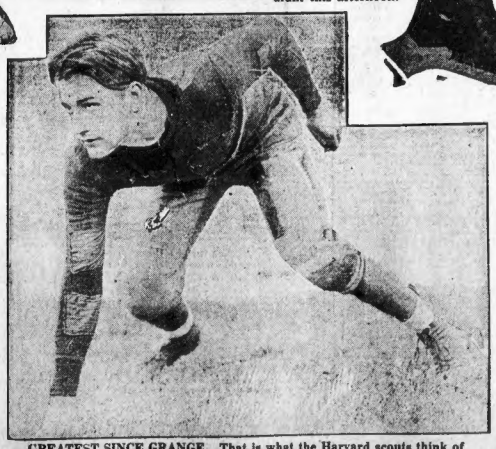
BIG NOISE in Harvard attack. Joe Crosby of Jamaica Plain is rated Harvard's greatest ball carrier, and unless he is in best form against the Green, the Crimson's offense will cease to function. Harvard's hopes of victory rest almost entirely upon young Mister Crosby.

SMILE WILL LEAVE face of Dan Simonds, Harvard guard, just as soon as the big Green-Crimson grid war gets under way in the Stadium this afternoon.

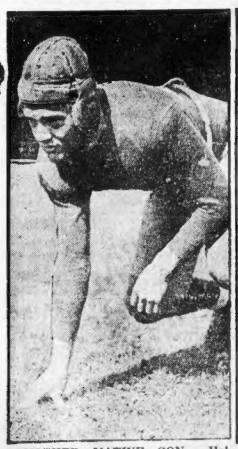
UNDERSTUDY of the mighty Myles Lane. Jerry Jeremiah who will spell Lane in the Dartmouth backfield while the Melrose youth is resting this p. m.



LAST MINUTE SHIFTS have changed the Harvard lineup considerably, but Jack Parkinson, guard, has escaped the axe and is all set to start against the Green. The Crimson lineman is not of the fancy type, but he does his work well.



GREATEST SINCE GRANGE. That is what the Harvard scouts think of Al Marsters of Arlington, who is playing his first year in the Dartmouth backfield, and who will play his first game in the Stadium this afternoon. Marsters was a quarterback in high school.



ANOTHER NATIVE SON. Hal Hamm of Arlington will do the kicking for Dartmouth today provided Dick Black is unable to play, as the Green coaches contend.

HERE HE IS. The highest scoring back in the universe, Myles Lane of Melrose and Dartmouth. All eyes will be on this Green flash today as he plays his last game in the Stadium. The aim of every Crimson player is to stop him.

The Best Concealed Play in Today's Games Will Be the Flask Pass

EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

MR. BOSTON drove into Winthrop square today aboard a fiery, smoke-eating horse. The veteran was disguised as a traffic cop, ready for parade duty.

"I borrowed the horse from Nick Flatley," said Mr. Boston. "All Nick asked was that I feed him. I'll let you in on the secret of the makeup. I'm on my way over to the Stadium to see Harvard play Dartmouth. As a mounted traffic cop, I'll whirl right into Soldiers Field. I'll let the horse out to pasture on the baseball diamond as I slip into the big horseshoe to see the some of the gridiron do their stuff.

"I know that Captain Anderson won't crack a smile when I come cantering over the Lars Anderson bridge. I knew the captain in the days before he had all that gold braid on his uniform and I'll tell the world he's as regular now as he was then.

"The scarcity of tickets for the Harvard-Dartmouth social caused me to take this action. As I remarked recently, one has to possess two college degrees to apply for a Harvard football ticket and four degrees to get a whiff at a pasteboard.

"I was suggested to me that I disguise myself as a Salvation Army lassie, take up a collection and then purchase a ticket from a speculator with the proceeds. I felt that such tactics would hardly be fair and so borrowed Nick Flatley's horse. It was a cinch to get a traffic cop's suit.

"Now if there isn't too much of a mob around the Stadium, I should have and easy time getting in to see the big show.

"I don't know what this game of football is coming to. They are not making the stadiums half large enough for the mobs which want to take in the big games. As the factories of higher education are adding thousands of students to their rolls each year, the only way Mr. John Public will soon be able to see a college football game will be in the movies.

"Ten years ago there were plenty of tickets for everybody. Even the boys wised the public up on the rules of the game and now there is a ticket famine. I think I'll favor all attempts to complicate the football rules so that Mister Average Citizen won't know what it's all about.

I MUST be breezing now as I have to buy a few hot tomales for my horse. A horse must have nourishment if he is to do a Paul Revere from Winthrop square to the Stadium. I know the old nag will get a kick out of eating that green grass over in Soldiers Field."

BOBBY BROWN BOXES FOR THE ARGONAUT A. A.

A welterweight elimination tournament comprising eight of the topnotchers of this class, one of whom is sure to wrest the world's title from the brow of Joe Dundee of Baltimore will be staged by the Argonne A. A. at Mechanics Building next week for what is sure to prove the greatest all star card ever presented Hub boxing fans.

Willie Harmon of New York, former local favorite, who has not appeared in this city in three years and winner of nine straight bouts will clash with Clyde Hull of Fort Worth, Texas, ine one of three features bouts.

Joe Hartnett of Halifax, welterweight king of the Maritime provinces will swap wallops with Billy Algers of Phoenix Arizona in another ten rounder.

Bobby Brown of Lowell, who gave Al Mello a good fight a few weeks ago and conqueror of Myer Cohan will face Joey Knapp of New York.

WOODSIES TAKE ON FALL RIVER

TODAY'S SOCCER

Boston vs. Fall River at Walnut Street.
Bethlehem vs. Brooklyn at Bethlehem.
New Bedford vs. Providence at Providence.
Cleveland vs. Chicago at Cleveland.
J. & P. Coats vs. Hartford at Pawtucket.
Clan Sutherland vs. Clan Lindsay at Brooklina.
Clan Wallace vs. Clan McGregor at Beverly.
Clan McIntosh vs. Clan McMillan at Cambridge.
Fore River vs. General Electric at Quincy.

By BILL McAULEY.

The Woodsies, with six victories and a tie out of seven games played, are out to add Fall River at Walpole street this afternoon to their list of victims.

This will be the first meeting of these great rivals in competition this season, and Walpole street will surely receive its biggest crowd of the year, for the fans know what to expect when a battle between this pair is down for decision.

Fall River National champions have never yet defeated the Blue and Gold on the local pitch in competition, and nothing would please them better than to score the first defeat over the present league leaders.

There is a possibility that Johnny Ballantyne, who has been out of the local team for a couple of weeks with an injured arm, may get into today's game and, if he does, the Blue and Gold's chances will be enhanced.

Otherwise they will use the same eleven that won from the National last Sunday and since the Peninsular eleven is one of the best, a real grid game is looked for.

BOWSER BOOKS THREE BOUT WRESTLING CARD

Next Thursday night up at the Grand Opera House Paul Bowser will stage a three-bout wrestling card that should prove interesting to the fans.

Mike Nazarian, Armenian champion wrestler, will top the card, meeting Herman Gehrig, the winner of the McFadden elimination tournament, and considered as one of the fastest and best lig'st heavies in the game.

The other half of the wind-up Thursday night wi' bring together Ned McGuire vs. Andy Zaharevic, the good looking Russian youngster that gave Stasiuk such a run for his money last week. On paper it looks like an even bout.

The opening bout will be between Bill Rudy of Billerica and George Adams, a likely looking middleweight wrestler.

CLARK SCHOOL WALLOPS TUFTS FRESHMEN, 19-0

The Tufts freshmen received the first setback of the season at the hands of Clark School of Hanover, N. H. The visitors outplayed the Jumbo yearlings and hung a 10-to-0 win.

Tufts threatened only once. With the ball on Clark's 3-yard line in the third quarter, the frosh were unable to gain an inch in 4 downs.

Mauro, former all-scholastic star at Malden High, scored two of the Clark touchdowns, both after long Anderson-ward runs, and one of Ou's long passes and covered 40 yards for the other.

TERRIER FRESHMEN TACKLE TECH FROSH

Boston University freshman eleven, will meet the Massachusetts Institute of Technology Frosh at the Tech Field today.

During the past few years a friendly rivalry has developed between the teams and both mentors have been pointing their elevens for this game.

"Cav" Says:

War Was Responsible for Increased Popularity of Football—Good Reporting of Games Also Aroused Interest

By MAJOR FRANK W. CAVANAUGH,
Head Football Coach at Fordham University.
(Copyright, 1927 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

TODAY the number of people watching football games throughout the country may be measured by hundreds of thousands. Many reasons have been advanced for this unprecedented interest in the sport. To me, who have been active in the game for 25 years as player, coach, and spectator, the steady increase in spectators and stadia seems but the confirmation of my own impressions.

Probably the most important contributing factor in football's pre-eminence was the war. Both in this country and overseas, football was played extensively by the boys. Practically every regiment had at least one team, and some of the larger camps were so well represented that they could have given high-class college outfits a real battle. "Cupie" Black's team at Newport, the Camp Stevens eleven, the Camp Taylor team, are a few who played some fine football.

Overseas, the elimination tourney brought out some of the hardest football I have ever seen Many a player who later made his name in collegiate football, got his gridiron baptism on one of these well-drilled elevens either in the United States or abroad.

West of Colgatae, Locke of Iowa, several of the Centre college stars, Joe Amos, who is now playing at Washington and Jefferson, are but a few of those who returned to college after the Armistice, to win All-American recognition.

More important to the future of the game was the number of boys who were induced to play for the first time. Most of them never passed the novice stage, but when they returned to their peacetime pursuits their love for the game survived.

PRACTICALLY the entire personnel of our forces were spectators. They were interested first in loyalty to their team, and secondly because of the game itself. There is something about football that appeals to soldiers.

In its strategy and tactics it is the nearest approach to war of any of our sports. It is also hard, and men who are training find it has a great appeal. I would say, without exaggerating, that four out of five men in the army came out with an interest in the game.

Some of them were fellows who hadn't been to high school or college, and up until the time they saw their comrades-in-arms playing they had no such interest in the game as the average man in the street has in polo.

After the war, these fellows came out Saturdays to see college teams or other school teams play. They brought their friends and relatives, they talked the game around the home until all were enthusiastic.

ANOTHER great reason for the popularity of the game was the legalizing of the forward pass in 1906. The forward pass revolutionized the game. The old days of mass attack, with weight and power the primary factors, were gone forever.

THE better reporting of the games by the newspapers, and the increase in the number of experts covering the games, has helped immeasurably. Twenty-five years ago a game well-reported was an exception. The game belonged to a few schools and colleges and the press didn't think it worth while to give the reports much space.

Nowadays teams not fortunate enough to have playing fields of their own, can play in ball parks in the bigger cities. This has helped to bring the game to the larger centers of population and was made many new friends of football.

Condition Is 'Color,' Tunney's Contention

By GENE TUNNEY
World's Heavyweight Champion.
(Copyright, 1927, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

HERE in the heart of the Maine woods, the lavish display of Autumn colors inspires thoughts of "color" in relation to boxing.

Some boxers seem to have an inborn source of ring "color." From their initial appearance in a bout until they make their exit, the spectators are enthralled with a highly perceptible radiation of this ring "color."

John L. Sullivan is known as "the most colorful fighter of all time." Jefferies, too, was similarly endowed, though to a far less degree, while the reputation as a "colorful" fighter that attaches to Jack Dempsey, former world's heavyweight champion, is universally known.

In my own case, a thousand and one times I have been made aware of the "lack of color" in my boxing.

One of the first fistic authorities to make this comment on my ring appearance was "Jimmy" Bronson, who acted as referee, when I won the light heavyweight championship of the A. E. F. in Paris.

"GENE," he said "your boxing lacks 'color.' There is an absence of the sensational and spectacular effect that is part of the very frame of a 'great' fighter.

"The 'it' that flashes in his 'socks' and punches—that his tense, whirling body scintillates to stir the emotions of a crowd, keeping them at 'fever pitch,' is not there."

That was in the Spring of 1919. I did not again have an opportunity to talk at length with Bronson for three years ago when I was surprised to know he had changed his opinion.

It was on a train from New Orleans to New York, the day after I had defeated his man, "Gunboat" Smith. "Billy" Gibson, my manager—I was then light-heavyweight champion—and I were sitting in a compartment, when I saw Bronson and Smith pass through the corridor.

They came in and sat down. "Jimmy" seemed elated despite the fact his man lost.

"Gene," he exclaimed, "I want to tell you something! You've got everything a fighter needs You showed me that last night when you 'whaled' a fellow off his feet who has never before hit the floor in his six hundred bouts.

"I'll tax back what I once said, that you lacked 'color.' You've got the 'it' that goes with a 'great' fighter."

I REPEAT his own words as they were as much a surprise to me as to Gibson. Furthermore, I realized it was a signal observation, not at all in accord with what I always had heard.

One day, two years later, when I was at Stroudsburg, training for the Philadelphia fight with Dempsey, Bronson was seated some rows back of the ringside. I was a few days before the bout. I had finished a "stiff" workout with Mays, "Bud" Gorman, and "Billy" Vidbeck and was on the "rubbing table," when "Jimmy" came in.

"Gene," he whispered, "you're perfect today. It's the time to quit. You've got 'everything' now—you showed that in your workout. Don't do anything more until you get in the ring with Dempsey."

I REMEMBER how serious he was. I sat up.

"What makes you think that?" I asked him. "Don't you know that practically all the sports writers sitting at the ringside studying me closely, think I am in poor shape "—'off-color,' as they say?"

"What they think doesn't alter my opinion," he replied. "You showed me 'color' today. Color is condition—mind, body and spirit, perfectly synchronized. You have it! Now hold it!"

Ever since, "Jimmy" has held to the same opinion. But whenever I hear him relating how he discovered my "ring color," I jokingly remind him that he still seems to be almost alone in his "find."

SALEM PROS EASY FOR LYNN NIGHTHAWKS

In a very slow and uninteresting game the Lynn Nighthawks defeated the Salem Pros at the General Electric Field, Lynn, by the score of 12 to 0.

Salem was without Art Parisien former Notre Dame star, and Ed Phelan its captain was carried from the field in the second period and this greatly hurt the Witchburgers chances of victory.

In the second period the Nighthawks received the ball at the middle of the field and by steady plunging and off tackle plays with a forward pass, Ryan to Archonka, which netted them 20 yards they brought the ball to the 4 yard line where Oscar Johnson shot off tackle for a touchdown.

In the fourth quarter Salem tried desperately to score by the aerial route and one of these passes was intercepted by Archonka who ran 20 yards for the second touchdown.

Both goals for the extra point were missed.

GOODWIN AFTER SHEPPARD AND DONOHUE AGAIN

Tom Goodwin, Suffolk A. A. matchmaker, is attempting to sign Johnny Sheppard of Woburn and Jackie Donohue of South Boston to meet in the semi-final to the Sammy Fuller-Chick Suggs New England featherweight championship bout at the Arena a week from Monday night.

Sheppard and Donohue staged the most sensational battle seen in Boston in many a day last Monday night, with the veteran Sheppard winning a decision over flashy, brilliant young Donohue.

A big part of the crowd disliked the decision, and showed its dislike by booing heartily for some minutes.

Many excellent judges of boxing, however agreed with the decision, feeling that Sheppard's relentless aggressiveness and withering body attack entitled him to the verdict.

Inside Golf

By Chester Horton

One fundamental error with the player must not fixed in his play before he can make real progress is that none of the advantages we have been discussing can be applied unless the wrists are kept sensitively free from stiffness and rigidity throughout the swing. If they become rigid, the swing is over with as far as any real good result is concerned. The grip must be just firm enough so that the grip can be kept close against the shaft. Anything beyond that is dangerous. At the top of the back swing, if the wrists are free, the clubhead will draw up the slack in them, and a little time should be allowed at that point for that to take place. Then keep them free and let the club swing forward. Don't close it, for the wrists will stiffen if you do.

CHURCH WOMEN NOW DEMAND DRY CELLARS

Among various general events for which New England church women are responsible was a meeting of the State Federation of Women's Clubs of Rhode Island in Providence Thursday, when they were addressed by Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, national chairman on law enforcement.

On the same day Mrs. Herbert Gurney, chairman of the New England branch of the National Committee of Women for Law Enforcement, spoke before the Unitarian women at Fairhaven.

These meetings followed closely a gathering last Monday of women representing many denominations at the Women's Boston City Club when it was voted to set aside Sunday, November 13, as a "Day of Prayer," in which national, New England and State law enforcement committees will co-operate.

This day of prayer will precede Thanksgiving Day when there is general gratitude for benefits. The women at their City Club meeting agreed there is great need for a "moral awakening" throughout the land, and they despaired of either great political party taking any determined stand on the law enforcement program.

New brooms and vacuum cleaners are getting ready for a great Boston house cleaning. There are several leaks to be looked after. Women want dry cellars."

On Monday a cast made up of members of the choir, several neighboring ministers, the Rev. George W. Shield and his wife will present the Bible drama "Nehemiah the Builder."

Clergymen of the city and the entire membership of the South Shore School of Religious Education have been invited to the performance, which will take place in the North Junior High School.

On Tuesday evening the Rev. H. H. Crane of Malden speaks to the young people. Wednesday night will see the church opened for all visitors.

Thursday evening is "All Quincy Night" when Mayor Thomas J. Meredith will be honored guest with Mayor E. O. Childs of Newton. Friday evening comes the dedication banquet.

Woman Reigns in Kitchen, Says Mrs. Peabody

MRS. HENRY W. PEABODY, one of America's leading missionaries, says the milk bottle is driving out the beer bottle.

Women are watching with interest and some amusement the working of the masculine mind in this political hunting season. Week by week the parties present candidates for President, the choice of a State or a bloc or the party machine. It does not occur to the gentlemen to inquire what the feminine half of the electorate may want.

There is a decided difference in the thinking. Men act logically, women biologically. In the struggle for race preservation, through the child, women have learned that one of their worst enemies is alcohol. It has the same brutalizing effect on the savage in Africa that it has on the university professor in New York. So women, decent, moral women are against alcohol, just as women in India and China are against opium which destroys their children and their men.

Women have learned in the years of prohibition, even though it is not well enforced in certain centres, that the milk bottle has driven out the beer bottle. According to the Illinois Agricultural Association from a nation-wide poll, milk bottles increased in 1925 two billion eight hundred and forty million. Father may be peeved over the loss of the beer bottle, but Mother reigns in kitchen and nursery, and in the Battle of Bottles milk wins.

In England, where prohibition is not conspicuous, each family on an average pays 15 shillings a week for beer against 3 shillings for milk, which is not a good ratio.

France, with a decreased birthrate, which scientists state is greatly affected by alcohol in light wines, has a billion-dollar liquor bill.

Women in America rejoice that our two billion dollars formerly wasted in alcoholic drinks now goes into better channels, savings banks, insurance companies, building associations, automobiles, radio, all of which show enormous increase.

The lack of enforcement in certain centres is serious, but can be remedied. In a woman's organization recently the question was asked, "Can you change your Senator's mind?" The answer was, "No, but you can change your Senator," which is a solution the women are considering since they hold half the votes.

MISSIONARIES ARE NOW ALL TOGETHER

Congregational women in the Women's Missionary Society have planned a busy season and have conducted this past week Tuesday and Wednesday at the Leyden Church, Brookline, the first semi-annual meeting at which among other things "Christian Strategy in the Far East" was discussed.

Events planned for the remaining days of October record the annual theatre party of the Jewish Anti-Tuberculosis Association next Tuesday evening.

Also on this date will be held the first regular meeting of the Boston Chapter of Hadassah at the Copley-Plaza Hotel, 2 p. m.

BAPTISTS WILL CONVENE AT SPRINGFIELD

Baptist women and Baptist men are turning their faces toward Springfield for the "Massachusetts Baptist Anniversaries" Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, of this coming week. A large number of leading Boston Baptists will be among those who take part in the various sessions. Tuesday afternoon will be given up to the Massachusetts Women's Baptist Society, of which Mrs. Grace Coleman Lathrop of Boston is president.

The women's slogan at this, their third annual meeting, will be, "Get Together." Topics for consideration will be "Get Together with Our Hostesses," "Get the Women Together," Get the Girls Together," "Get Your Neighbors Together," "Get the Children Together." This conference will be held in the First Baptist Church of Springfield.

Boston men who will be among the speakers are, Professor Woodman Bradbury, of Newton Theological Seminary, the Rev. Otis Foye, of the Dorchester Baptist Church, the Rev. Denton J. Nelly of Medford, Mr. John F. Rood, Malden, the Rev. Robert L. Webb, Dorchester, the Rev. Nelson M. Burbank, Revere, the Rev. Everett C. Herrick, Newton Seminary, Mr. William E. Macurda of Watertown. Women to be heard include Mrs. Lathrop and Miss Clara Merritt of Boston.

The picture on the right is of the Rev. G. Vaughan Shedd, pastor of the church, to whom much credit is due that so large an undertaking has been successfully completed. Dedication exercises take place tomorrow and through the week.

A Real Drama of Intrigue in Boston Theatrical Life After the Curtain

CHAPTER 33.

A HOT sun flung a shower of ruddy light over the Place Vendome. At 9 o'clock on a clear afternoon all feminine Paris was abroad.

On one side of the place the Ritz Hotel opened and closed its doors upon fashionably dressed women.

Before the door of a big jeweler to the very wealthy, the very extravagant, and the very discriminating, a small, but extremely smart cabriolet drew up. A footman jumped down from the box and opened the door. Two women descended.

The first, short and stout, with a black velvet band supporting two plump chins, carried a lavish box upholstered in gros-de-Naples. She was followed by a slender woman dressed in the shade called ashes of roses. A little felt hat, fitting the small head like a skull cap, was pulled down over long lashed blue eyes. Two black sickles of hair cut crescents on white cheeks. Two tiny pink ears peeped from behind the crescents, and from each, on a fine thread of diamonds, hung a pearl as delicate as a tear drop.

The two women moved side by side across the pavement, and would have entered the jeweler's had their progress not been impeded by the person of an imminently tall man with a red beard, who bowed extravagantly over the hand of the woman in rose, exclaiming: "Madame, Madame, I have been searching everywhere for you. You are as elusive as a sunbeam. Let me be among the most sincere congratulations upon a most phenomenal success."

"That's very kind of you," Becky replied, speaking in French with a little hesitation, "I received your flowers. It's more than a compliment . . . from you," she sighed, flushing, pleasantly, to the plump matron beside her, and said, "Madame de Pagsy, it's a pleasure to present to you the foremost theatrical critic of France, Monsieur Aristide Briquard."

Briquard kissed Madame de Pagsy's hand, but his eyes were all for Becky and he murmured in gratified vanity, "Yes, yes, that is right . . . am indeed the very king of critics. It is admitted everywhere. It is because I have been cruel, Madame. My words have been sharp daggers to pierce the balloons of conceited artists."

"They have been showers of honey for me, Monsieur," replied Becky, smiling. "I believe it was your column which gained my latest victory, so you are going to be the first to hear of it. My engagement with Les Cou-Cou Comique is at an end, and it is arranged that I am to give three concerts—here, in Paris. And at the Opera House, Monsieur. So I'm to have my great opportunity, my great trial."

Briquard himself was astonished at this bevy; his flattering manner grew a shade more obsequious. He exclaimed: "The king of critics bows before the queen of song. And indeed," he added, "Briquard modestly counts some share in the arch triumph. For my word is respected, Madame, but respected with a respect! You see, it is so—I stab by letter and, vanishing all the little doggies with harsh words. But when—once—I choose to be kind, then they say: 'Ha-this must be great! Briquard admires it.'"

Becky smothered a giggle in her collar, but pearls danced against her cheeks. Madame de Pagsy coughed and grew red in the face. Briquard, beaming over his tangled beard, went on.

"If I may add a single ray to your hale, Madame . . . permit me to offer an invitation. Madame the Princess de X, went to the Cou-Cou Comique especially to hear you. She was immensely taken with all your songs, but especially the small thing . . . the Irish ballad, which you gave for an encore. She wishes the honor of your company at tea."

The color receded from Becky's cheeks, and her voice came with an effort. "The Princess de X.? Tea? But . . . but . . . ."

Briquard poured out a torrent of impartial compliments, but Becky was aware of the honor without his explanation.

"The Princess has lived in England, she understands the songs," he said. "She said you had a touching sincerity . . . Ah, there was a verse, Madame, it ran, I believe, 'I'll take the golden locks of age, and ring'—for the finger,' so, you know?" Becky nodded. "The Princess said you sang as one who had known pain and poverty."

"I have known many things," Becky said hastily. "I am sensible of the honor. I will be charmed. But first I have a purchase to make in this shop."

"You are not," Briquard ventured humorously, "intending to fill that huge—that immense—box with jewels of the Orient?"

Becky laughed merrily. No, that was not her plan. But she had a whim that was almost as foolish. If her companion would lift the lid . . .

Madame de Pagsy raised the creonne cover, and Briquard looked in, gasping. On a satin pillow scented with sachet lay a doll. Her billowing skirts were of gold cloth embroidered in crimson; her bodice rose point lace, the cape which folded about her shoulders had a gold edging of sable stitched on with gold thread. Above all this finery, lying crookedly across one side, was a soiled and faded face, stupid, flat, grotesque.

"But, Madame," choked Briquard, "such magnificence for a dirty rag doll."

"Yes," said Becky. "She is very old, older than I am, perhaps. The Princess is right, Monsieur Briquard I have known poverty, and the little creature was my companion then, and so she shall be now."

"But you could buy her a fresh face, Madame, that would be seemly."

"No, no. It would only be foolish A rag doll she was born, and a rag doll she will be. Where are those her jewels and cloth of gold. I could change her for a, but her soul would still be savage. One should never change. Monsieur, believe that. So Charlotte will stay as she is, and Madame Keller can always keep her poor neck stuff. Will you come in and help us choose a necklace for her?"

But certainly, Madame, certainly," answered the bewildered critic. "Ah, women, women, what fantasies they have. I have known dozens of women, and yet they remain mysteries. Nevertheless allow me to warn you of jeweled dolls. They are a temptation to the wicked. Profit by the experience of your friend the Marquise de Saint Solle."

"Why, what do you mean? What has happened to her?"

"Hadn't you heard the news then? But she is prostrated."

"She dined with us only the night before last," Becky said. "She seemed in the best of health then. She was radiant."

"Too radiant, perhaps, Madame, with jewels shining like the sun. She was robbed yesterday. Her pearls have vanished, and all her bracelets, including the one with the Rajah's emerald."

"How shocking, how dreadful!" Becky lifted her hands in dismay. Then as a sleuth salesman in a cutaway coat appeared: "Yes, I have come for the collar I spoke of. The one with the rubies." And, turning to Briquard again: "Life is like that, Monsieur. We never know when we may be robbed of our dearest possessions."

Becky smothered a giggle in her collar, but pearls danced against her cheeks. Madame de Pagsy coughed and grew red in the face. Briquard, beaming over his tangled beard, went on.

"If I may add a single ray to your hale, Madame . . . permit me to offer an invitation. Madame the Princess de X, went to the Cou-Cou Comique especially to hear you. Remarkable Spirit of Friendship Seen in the Wilson Group

By RAY STANNARD BAKER

CHAPTER 28.

Copyright, 1927, by Doubleday, Page & Co

DURING many years at Princeton the friendships of a small group, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Hibben, Mr. and Mrs. Miss Ricketts and often Professor and Mrs. Bliss Perry and others, were remarkable for their loyalty. I guessed when they did not have tea together and spend an hour of rare good talk, Professor Perry gave me a letter to the author

"For a long time, on Sunday evenings, Mr. and Mrs. Hibben, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Perry and I used to meet regularly for tea at the house of Miss Ricketts, and I think Wilson was always at his best on those occasions. If he could be criticized at all as a general talker, it might be that he sometimes seemed more interested in what he was saying than in what you were saying; but presently this is only like a skilled golfer playing against you who is more intent upon his own shots than upon yours. Some such conversational game interested him and fascinated him."

Wilson's letters to his wife are full of lively glimpses of these gatherings and of his devotion to friends like the Hibbens.

"I went around to their house (the Hibbens'), as usual, at four o'clock, to find that I was to go to Miss Ricketts' alone. Jack had

Enjoyed Conversation With Many Brilliant Women

"After I left you this morning I came upon me that I had spoken rather ungrudgingly about your reference to the honor system. I was thinking only of the thing which lies very close to my heart, and I did not consider how I spoke. Pray forgive the blunt ness for the cause's sake."

Many of the most delightful aspects of Wilson's life was his friendship with women. Real friendship between men and women is more rare than most people cannot in the least understand it. In Wilson's life it played a very great part.

Several such friendships, like that with the Misses Smith of New Orleans, Mrs. Harry F. Reid of Baltimore and Mrs. Crawford H Toy of Boston, mostly begun during the years of the Princeton professorship, lasted with undimmed ardor to the end of his life. Other friendships, like that with Miss Ricketts and Mrs. Hibben of Princeton, were scarcely less devoted. The correspondence connected with most of these friendships is voluminous.

Mrs. Bayard Dod says that her father always liked brilliant women, enjoyed knowing them, enjoyed still more talking with them. "Cultivated and conversable" was one of his tests whether of a man or a woman. His letters to his wife contain many descriptions of his meetings with brilliant and interesting women.

Mrs. Wilson encouraged these friendships—indeed, they were often due to her own friendships as his. She felt that she was often "too grave" or "too sober."

"I am not gamesome," she quoted Cassius.

She used frequently to say, according to Florence Hoyt

"Since he has married a wife who is not gay I must provide for him friends who are."

Miss Hoyt, in a letter to the author, says that Ellen Axson Wilson recognized the intellectual refreshment he had from clever women . . . There was never a woman more large-minded, more lacking in petty jealousies.

One of the most charming of these friendships was with Miss Lucy and Miss Mary Smith of New Orleans. It began in the Summer of 1896 when the Wilson family were spending a vacation in the mountains of Virginia. The Misses Smith were daughters of a Presbyterian minister who had been a classmate and great friend of Dr. Joseph R. Wilson.

They were descendants of John Marshall. It seems to have been an instantaneous friendship on both sides, and although there was no blood relationship, it was not long before they were calling each other cousins—"Cousin Mary," "Cousin Lucy."

They were both extremely lively minded women, full of fun and with keen intellectual interests and enthusiasm. From time to time after they visited the Wilsons nearly every year, often spending the vacations with them, and during the time that Wilson was Governor of New Jersey, occupying a part of the house at Princeton where the Wilsons finally lived. The friendship was most intimate and charming throughout, as the correspondence indicates. Here are characteristic letters:

"September 18, 1897.

"My dear Friend:

"You don't know how you have both taken hold on our hearts! Ellen says (particularly since New Orleans doesn't now seem a good place to go to for some time months to come) that you will not promise your Kentucky kinsfolk to come to them at the very first of October, but that you will generously give us the full three or first agreed upon, at least and I cry aloud Amen.

"Yours with affectionate regard,

"WOODROW WILSON."

He writes the next year:

"My dear Miss Lucy:

"What you want is a 'sentiment,' is it not, that can be 'proposed' at a toast? How would this do

"To our Country: May her literary men do her honor by speaking the truth of her and of all things, may they give her immortality by making the truth eloquent and beautiful.

"It is a great pleasure to do anything for you! I could not tell you how often or with what deep affection Ellen and I think and speak of you both —or how eagerly we look forward to next Summer's reunion The Summer of '97 was a lucky Summer and made us rich with this new friend [illegible] which now seems always to have been ours. Common Sense Diet

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D., Former President of the American Medical Association

YOU exercise common sense in diet when you eat a normal variety of things that you have found by experience to agree with you. But you should remember that the diet that agrees with you at one period of your life or under one set of conditions is not best adapted to you at another age or under other conditions.

You should remember, too, that it is not always true that "what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander." It consequently nearly always happens that, under a uniform diet in a large family, somebody suffers because of improper food.

It is futile to listen to anyone, friend, doctor, writer, who says "eat this, eat that," or "don't eat either." You cannot argue from one person to another. A brain worker who does a lot of highly responsible and technical work and who is tall, lean, and neurasthenic, will not profit by the advice of a friend who does no work to speak of, and is short, stout and has a high blood pressure. Eskimos may live on fish, and Hindu on rice, the American city dweller requires something different.

Very often the food faddist will say, "Look how fit I am," and he probably is fit. He was born fit, and remains so in spite of his fads. It must be remembered that the man with a theory starts in a state of belief which is a great factor in the success of the experiment, but his success is due to his enthusiasm far more than to his practice.

The human frame is very adaptable. Nevertheless it cannot adapt everything. There is a type of person, generally the "intuitive" type to whom ideas are more important than facts, who revels in the increased nervous tension which under-nourishment causes, and who takes it for clarity and spirituality of mind.

He is tampering with a very dangerous drug, which may lead to suicide or the mental hospital.

Sir Thomas Horder once treated a fruit and vegetable advocate who had practiced his principles so thoroughly that he had to be nursed back to life with beef tea and raw meat juice. Raw fruit, however, has two advantages besides those usually claimed for it.

It is nearly all water, of which most people do not drink enough and it is bulky without being really a food, so that those who eat it are satisfying their diet unaware, which is usually a good thing.

We know very little of the ways in which fruity diet causes disease. Overeating causes in some people, but by no means in all, gout and obesity or a dilated stomach. Predisposed persons may get diabetes from an excess of sugary and starchy foods, or kidney disease from too much meat, but this is only partial.

A LITTLE PRAISE, NOW AND THEN IS GOOD

HOW about it—do you ever compliment the members of your family?

Mother likes a bit of praise when she prepares a good dinner.

Dad wants credit when he has done something praiseworthy.

Daughter wants to hear you say so when she has performed in a meritorious manner.

Son likes to be told when he has accomplished a task satisfactorily.

And so it goes.

Silent appreciation is not enough. You may feel that as long as you don't complain everything should be considered as being all right.

Especially the members of your family ought to know when you are pleased, without your having to say anything about it.

Well, perhaps they do, but just the same they like to hear the complimentary things about themselves or their work.

You like this yourself, so why shouldn't the others?

Don't neglect to praise the members of your own family.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

THE New York City police department has received orders to round up all the desperate characters and deport them. A lot of these guys are so tough you couldn't blow them out of town with a tornado.

ONE fellow was so hard, it took three cyclones to knock his hat off.

HE used to live in Chicago, but he got disgusted when the holdup men started taking an hour off for dinner.

NOT only that, but he found a lady finger in a thug's lunch box.

AND he likes his yeggs hard-boiled.

HE stayed in Illinois until he wore out all the patrol wagons.

HE used to bite holes in the jails.

HIS pal was just as tough. It took the State three days to hang him.

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By HELEN ROWLAND

WHEN a middle-aged man marries, asserts a popular writer it is not in order to escape loneliness, but in order to achieve it! He is looking not for a soul-mate, but for a good alibi—a shield and barrier between him and all the poachers, time wasters and pests, including women.

• • •

This is a little startling; but, after all, if it is true of the Busy Business Man, it may be true also of the Tired Business Woman.

• • •

Why does a successful modern business woman exchange her freedom, her independence and the attentions of a lot of men for the inattention of just ONE?

• • •

With a good income, a ducky little apartment, a snappy little car, and plenty of good clothes, good friends, and good times, why does she so often annex a man?

• • •

Does SHE, too, seek an alibi and a "rest cure"?

After all, "My husband thinks, says, wants, will or won't" is as good an alibi as "My wife won't let me!"

• • •

Just the magic words "My husband" spoken in the right tone, will put every other man in his place—from the amorous employer to the snippy elevator boy.

• • •

After a hard day at the office, it is far easier to go home and listen to one man's monologue than to go out and listen to a lot of men's applesauce.

• • •

It is far easier to cater to one set of habits and idiosyncrasies all the time than to have to live up to a different man's ideas every evening.

• • •

It is far more comforting to have one man around who understands you, than to jazz around with a lot of men, most of whom bore you.

• • •

This business of keeping marcelled, made-up and "peppy," keeping up with game, keeping on the go, keeping engagements and keeping a list of admirers, gets SO tiresome, after a while!

• • •

It's nice and cozy and restful and relaxing to have someone around, for whom you don't have to scintillate and sparkle and keep your nose powdered; to whom you don't have to play bourt and vamp and "Wonder Woman."

• • •

Of course, an ideal husband should be an inspiration, a partner, and a soul-mate. But, falling short of that, almost ANY fairly good husband is a "rest cure!"

You don't have to hide the worry-wrinkles or the little puffs under the eyes or the gray hairs sneaking out here and there, from a husband. You don't have to keep him guessing! He knows, he knows, HE knows! He has your NUMBER; and if he is still fond of you and companionable, he's as much of a stimulant as you need after a hard day at the office.

• • •

Single-blessedness is not half so blessed as it sounds or looks!

FRISBY CARRIES FIGHT STRAIGHT TO THE PEOPLE

Photo Shows mass meeting addressed by Mister Frisby in his campaign to keep slot machines out of the public schools. Note Mrs. Frisby in the foreground.

By MISTER FRISBY
Our Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Forty thousand people remained at home last night instead of attending the Frisby-for-Vice-President mass meeting, which was held in the Coliseum as predicted exclusively in these columns.

This was doubtless the result of a systematic and nefarious whispering campaign carried on by Frisby's enemies, who spread the word that Frisby's speech would be broadcast by radio.

"I am not controlled by the radio trust," announced Frisby shortly before reading his 37,000-word address.

"If the radio capitalists want to broadcast my speeches and pay me a small fee to cover incidental expenses, well and good," declared Frisby, with characteristic vigor. "But when I found no microphone was installed I realized the extent of the insidious, underhanded, vitriolic and biased efforts that are being made to muzzle me."

When asked by his enemies—rivals of the radio trust—if he had not agreed to pay $37.50 installation charges, Frisby issued a brief statement which said:

"It is only a verbal contract and not worth the paper it is written upon."

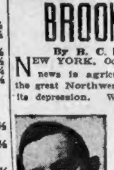
N. Y. BANKS IN MOVEMENT TO BROOKLYN

By R. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—The best news is agricultural. At last the great Northwest is rising from its depression. With the agricultural South doing well and the Far West keeping up steam, our farming States promise to enjoy a fair share of our national prosperity. Indeed, it may be that agriculture will fare better than industry in coming months. And perhaps better, also, than Wall Street market.



B. C. Forbes.

New York no longer monopolizes the raising of large blocks of capital in this country. It sponsored less than half of last month's seven-million-dollar issue of the million-dollar-and-upward class. Chicago, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Boston, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Detroit, Pittsburgh, New Orleans, Seattle and other cities have grown wealthy in financial importance.

Los Angeles has just achieved a very notable piece of local financing. Its famous public utility has developed over two decades by John G. Bullock, desired to obtain $5,500,000 and called into consultation J. Dabney Day, president of the Citizens' National Bank of Los Angeles and its affiliated trust company and security company. Mr. Day promptly replied that all the money could be supplied very readily at home. Forthwith $4,000,000 of 5 per cent. bonds and $4,500,000 of preferred stock were offered Californians.

The result? The entire amount was several times oversubscribed.

Financing of local enterprises by local bankers and investors is a healthy, gratifying development. There is no reason why powerful American cities should depend upon Wall Street whenever new local capital, even in large amounts, is needed. From all appearances Wall Street will be kept busy enough with gigantic foreign loans and domestic issues of enormous magnitude.

Chicago and San Francisco recently announced plans for bond issues of $10,000,000 and $4,000,000 respectively.

NATIONAL POLICIES OF THE HEARST NEWSPAPERS

1. An agreement of English-speaking peoples to preserve peace among themselves and promote the peace of the world.
2. A constitutional amendment to provide for the election of United States Senators in numbers proportionate to the population of each State, but no State to have less than two Senators. A reapportionment of Congressional representation immediately after every census, or in case of the failure of Congress so to act, to make the apportionment automatic at the end of the first Congressional session, the proportion of population for each representative in each case to be that of the existing Congress.
3. A separate Department of the Army, of the Navy and of the Air Forces, all united under a Secretary of National Defence.
4. Federal action to the limit of Federal Government powers to abolish illiteracy among the people of the United States, and the creation of a Secretary of Education.
5. Necessary measures to secure the election of Congress in November and its installation on the 1st of January following, and the inauguration of a President on the 1st of January immediately following his election in November.

"You Win $100,000!"

"Yes! Give It to Me—and How Soon Can I Start for Home!"

You might just as well give the baby a razor-blade to play with as trust the average young man with $100,000 to spend as he sees fit, but Lewis H. Keith, whose earthly career came to an end a few days since at Kingston in Plymouth County, very likely was no ordinary young man.

He was 24 years old when, in July, 1872, he invested ten dollars in tickets of the Public Library Lottery promoted by the State of Kentucky by authority of the Blue Grass Legislature.

The tickets were tucked away in a store safe until, one day, a messenger came a-running from Plymouth with news that young Keith was a winner.

He hurried by rail and boat to Louisville, where Governor Bramlette handed him his check.

And then what did he do? He might have run for Congress, but he didn't, and while there were no musical comedies to back, or oil companies to buy into, there were gambling houses in plenty—between Louisville and Kingston—and the running horse was almost as popular as today.

Keith must have been one of THE Keiths of his neck of the woods. If he was "full of pep," like the pretty girl in "Broadway," he was unlike that charming person in that he had "perfect control."

He came back home, built him a house, invested in a modest yacht—everybody in Kingston owned one in those days—and in his time owned trotting horses. But he opened no cold bottles for the boys and when the Angel tapped him on the shoulder, a day or two ago, he had reached the ripe age of 79.

One would say from the record that "Lew" Keith was a man of character and NO GAMBLER. Your gambling man would have been out for a "killing." HE would have said that this $100,000 was Lady Luck's invitation to "roll it into a million."

And very likely he would have checked out from the county farm, just before the Centennial Exposition.

Benevolent Gas Masks

They Work to HELP Human Beings, Not to KILL Them

GAS MASKS MADE USEFUL

Many important inventions based originally on the desire to kill end by being useful. The first savage that fastened a sharp flint at the end of a stick probably wanted to kill his half human neighbor in a hand-to-hand fight.

And the first savage that ever thought of bending a bow and shooting an arrow wanted to kill some neighbor safely AT A DISTANCE.

That sharp flint, fastened to a stick, was the beginning of all our tools, plows, axes, chisels, etc. And the bow and arrow ultimately did more to FEED the human race than to KILL the human race.

So with the gas mask, which was invented as part of warfare to kill men by poison.

Already that gas mask, as you see in this picture, is extremely useful. The photograph shows a room near Westminster Bridge, in London, where gases are tested and masks tried out to help firemen and miners in their dangerous work. Also these scientific and useful masks are employed to test the purification of the human breath by means of oxygen. Little by little men become civilized, and their most brutal ideas often, in the end, contribute to civilization.

Art

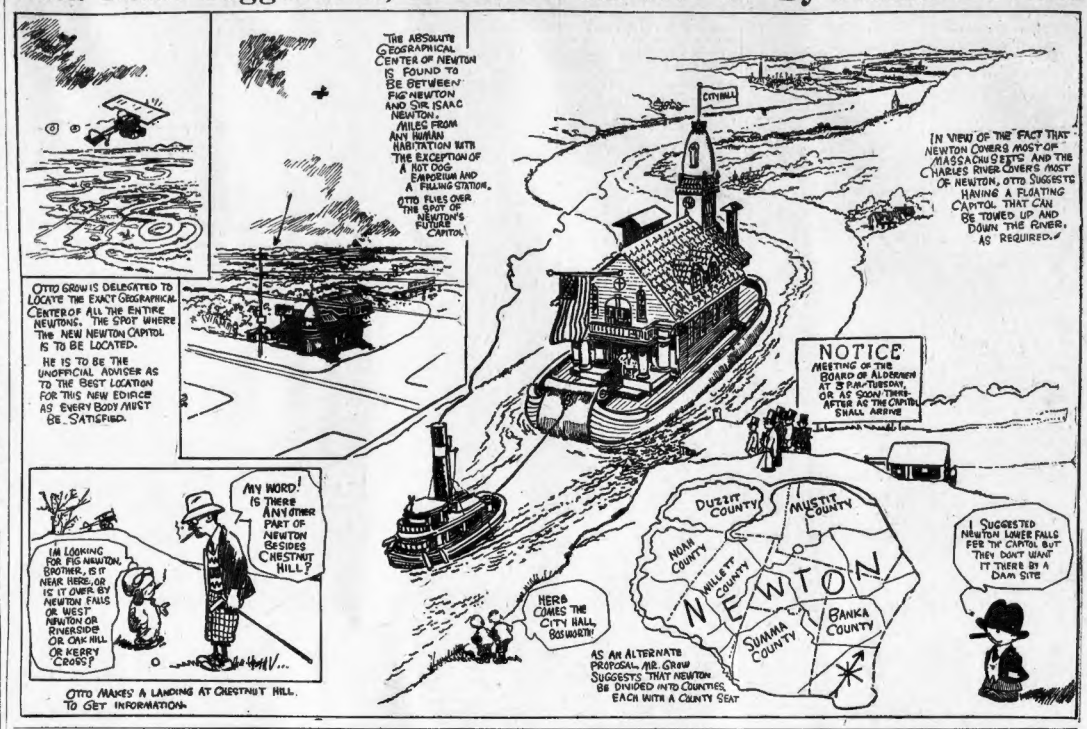
How Bootleggers Are Helping It

Bootleg kings are crowding the elite out of the seats for the Chicago opera and are advancing in other lines, having bought up some of the finest examples of art.

The connection between liquor and music evidently is a holdover from the pre-Volstead days, when amateur quartets, in finding the barkeep, warbled many songs.

But when liquor is sixty cents a drink the customers and the dealers can't both go to the opera, so naturally it is the customer who stays at home.

With These Suggestions, Newton Is All Set -:- By Franklin Collier



THE ABSOLUTE GEOGRAPHICAL CENTER OF NEWTON IS FOUND TO BE BETWEEN FIG NEWTON AND SIR ISAAC NEWTON, MILES FROM ANY HUMAN HABITATION WITH THE EXCEPTION OF A HOT DOG EMPORIUM AND A FILLING STATION.
OTTO FLIES OVER THE SPOT OF NEWTON'S FUTURE CAPITOL
OTTO GROW IS DELEGATED TO LOCATE THE EXACT GEOGRAPHICAL CENTER OF ALL THE ENTIRE NEWTONS. THE SPOT WHERE THE NEW NEWTON CAPITOL IS TO BE LOCATED.
HE IS TO BE THE UNOFFICIAL ADVISER AS TO THE BEST LOCATION FOR THIS NEW EDIFICE AS EVERY BODY MUST BE SATISFIED.
IN VIEW OF THE FACT THAT NEWTON COVERS MOST OF MASSACHUSETTS AND THE CHARLES RIVER COVERS MOST OF NEWTON, OTTO SUGGESTS HAVING A FLOATING CAPITOL THAT CAN BE TOWED UP AND DOWN THE RIVER, AS REQUIRED.
NOTICE
MEETING OF THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN AT 3 P.M. TUESDAY, OR AS SOON THEREAFTER AS THE CAPITOL SHALL ARRIVE
I SUGGESTED NEWTON LOWER FALLS FOR THE CAPITOL BUT THEY DON'T WANT IT THERE BY A DAM SITE
I'M LOOKING FOR FIG NEWTON, BROTHER, IS IT NEAR HERE, OR IS IT OVER BY NEWTON FALLS OR WEST NEWTON OR RIVERSIDE OR OAK HILL OR KERRY CROSS?
ANY WORD! IS THERE ANY OTHER PART OF NEWTON BESIDES CHESTNUT HILL?
OTTO MAKES A LANDING AT CHESTNUT HILL TO GET INFORMATION.
HERE COMES THE CITY HALL BOSWORTH!
AS AN ALTERNATE PROPOSAL, MR. GROW SUGGESTS THAT NEWTON BE DIVIDED INTO COUNTIES, EACH WITH A COUNTY SEAT
CITY HALL
DUZZIT COUNTY
MUSTIT COUNTY
NOAH COUNTY
WILLETT COUNTY
NEWTON
SUMMA COUNTY
BANKA COUNTY

LOOKING BACKWARD ON SAVAGE STATE

By DR. FRANK CRANE

H. SETON-KARR, a noted traveler, told the Anthropological Section at the British Association for the Advancement of Science the other day that the savage state of existence was the most ideal.

We have often had the same feeling. We have looked over the fence and envied the pigs in their sty. There are many of us who look back at the Middle Ages and wish that we might enjoy the simple life as they used to.

Many people object to sending missionaries to foreign lands, such as China and Africa, because the natives are much better off in their original state.

But it won't do. Civilization has its diseases and advancement its drawbacks, but on the whole we are better off than we used to be. Summing it all up, the advantages are in favor of a civilized community.

We may have nervous prostration and hardening of the arteries, but at least we don't live in the days of human slavery, days when dueling was in vogue and "civilization was upon a dung heap," as was the case in the Middle Ages.

Men are no longer tortured for their religious beliefs, and it is no longer the custom in the United States for the host to get drunk and outdo his guests in the business of rolling under the table.

On the whole, we prefer to be civilized, although there is no doubt that civilization has its drawbacks.

The trouble is that retrogression may be all right for animals, but will not do for people with minds.

It is the mind that is forever groping forward and the mind that is continually progressing.

A Southern slave, a black man, having escaped from the South, came to a judge in Cincinnati and wanted help in getting to Canada.

"Why," said the judge, "did you not have a kind master and were you not treated well, with plenty to eat and a good place to sleep? What did you want to run away for?"

"I don't know, judge," replied the colored man. "I jest can't exactly say—but the place is open down there if you want it."

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

Few sons attain the praise of their great sires, and most their sires' disgrace. —Homer.

Take care that no one hates you justly. —Syrus.

A knock-down argument: 'tis but a word and a blow. —Dryden.

Honor is like an island, rugged and without shores; we can never reenter it once we are on the outside. —Boileau.

The highest happiness, the purest joys of life, wear out at last. —Goethe.

Trust not to outward show. —Juvenal.

To please great men is not the least species of praise. —Horace.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

IS love a cheat?

Anna thinks it is. It's the old story. She loved him. Yes, he had a terrible record but she was sure she could reform him. So, for a year, she threw caution to the winds, and defied her friends in her efforts to change him. She failed—utterly. Now she cries bitterly that "love doesn't pay."

Millions of other men and women have made, and are making that same cry. It runs through most of our human tragedy. Parents who wish to shape their children's lives—husbands trying to reform wives and wives trying to reform husbands—lovers and sweethearts struggling in vain for mastery over each other—all of them failing and all of them protesting—

"We have been cheated! They said that there was no wonder which love could not work. So we loved with all our hearts. We sacrificed everything. We didn't have a selfish thought—we only wanted to help. But it was all in vain. Those we tried to help went right on spoiling their lives and breaking our hearts in spite of our love. Love failed us."

Did Love fail them? Does Love ever cheat us? OH DO WE CHEAT OURSELVES BY OUR OWN MISUSE OF LOVE?

We have a right to love others. It is the most beautiful and profitable privilege we have. It will reward us with a joy and a vision which can come from no other function in our lives. All of these gifts love will always give us, if we love sincerely and unselfishly.

But there is a limit to love's gift—and love's rights.

We have the right to love — BUT WE HAVE NO RIGHT TO POSSESS OUR LOVED ONES.

We have the right to serve—BUT WE HAVE NO RIGHT TO MANAGE THE LIVES OF THOSE WE SERVE, HOWEVER WISE OUR PLANS MAY SEEM TO BE.

If they are doing wrong, our hearts may ache for them and we may offer them every help in our power. If they persist in doing wrong we may protect ourselves from them and refuse to be involved in their actions.

All of these things we may do in the name of love. But, beyond that, we may not go—nor expect love to go.

There is a simple, sensible reason for this. No man can weave his muscles into another man's body, nor his wisdom into another man's brain. Each man must create his physical and spiritual health for himself and his character is worthless unless he does. And those experiments and failures which to us seem so tragic are often an essential part of a man's development.

For that reason, love must keep hands off. That is the fundamental law of all human live. It is were not so, every life would be mangled and thwarted by love's meddling.

Love greatly—but observe the limitations of love for they are sacred.

And if you venture too far in another life, and fail to effect your purpose—do not cry—"Love has cheated me!" Say rather—"I have tried to do something that I had no right to do and I have tricked myself. I pretended to be unselfish, but I know now that I was really selfish. I wanted to possess and manage another life—and it can't be done. I will go on loving—for love is the finest thing on earth—but I will not misuse love to gratify my own egotism."

Remember that as you love. It may save you from a very cruel heartache.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

SOME say no man can lift the veil
And peer down hidden future ways,
That none can read the secret tale of coming days. Some call it wholly wise and right, this law that clouds in mystery the prospect, whether dark or bright, of time to be. Yet there's a little lad I know whose horoscope I dare to read; I claim his budding hopes shall blow, his plans succeed. No powers have I as seer, nor any strange, supernal force by right of which I dare to peer down life's long course. How, then, predict that joy shall bless this laddie in the hereafter? What tells so much? Why, I confess, it is his smile! It is the spark that lights his eye, the look that holds no hint of guile; love, life, shall crown him by and by. What tells this smile

WHEN COAL BEDS WERE FORMED

By Garrett P. Serviss,
Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest

WHAT an amazing spectacle some parts of the earth must have presented when the coal beds were formed, if the "transport theory" of their origin is correct!

Some geologists think that the coal beds were laid down "on the spot," by the accumulation in sunken areas of vegetable deposits, as occurs to-day on a small scale in places where peat bogs exist. But the better opinion appears to be that the material subsequently changed into coal, was brought together in low lands by tremendous floods which swept down from the higher lands and the mountains bringing enormous masses of trees and undergrowth, sufficient in quantity to bury great areas under hundreds or thousands of feet of tangled trunks, branches and crushed foliage. Covered up by later deposits of mud and sand, likewise brought by water and which eventually became rock, the vast beds have slowly turned into coal.

The latest, and perhaps the greatest, scenes of this kind occurred in the Tertiary Age—a dramatic prologue to the entry of man upon the terrestrial stage, and to see how intimate their connection was with the future career of the coming master of the earth we have only to reflect on the part that the coal beds have played in the development of modern, scientific civilization. The time may come when we shall be compelled to do without coal, having exhausted the mines, but when that time arrives we shall either behold the end of our civilization or we shall have mastered another source of mechanical energy of equal or greater extent and potency.

These facts again emphasize the immense importance and absolute necessity of water in the life history of the world. It not only supplies the largest constituent of living organisms, but it gives a kind of life circulation to the earth itself. Expanded by solar heat, it rises in an aerial form from the surface of the steaming oceans, and then, recondensed by the cold of surrounding space, it pours down from the mountains and the high lands, becoming the mightiest of all agents of transportation, sculpturing the face of the globe and bringing about changes of level that in the course of geologic ages, replace land by sea or sea by land.
